GRAND TRUNK HEAD ADMITS DEAL

WOMAN HEADS STRIKERS IN RIOT

NEW MOVE MUST AID NEW ENGLAND, SAYS CHAMBERLIN

ARRAIGN GIRL AS POISONER

Gladous O. St. Denis, fifteen years old, of Lowell, was arraigned in the Superior Court at East Cambridge today on two counts of attempting to murder her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred M. Jordan, of Lowell, on September 19, by putting poison into their coffee.

She at first pleaded not guilty. After Judge Chase had begun to impanel a jury and five members had taken their seats, the girl nodded to Deputy Sheriff Courtney, telling him that she wanted to change her plea to guilty. This fact was communicated to Judge Chase by Assistant District Attorney Weir.

Judge Chase asked the girl if she realized what she was charged with, and she seemed in doubt. Judge Chase read the long indictment to her, and then appointed Dr. Henry C. Baldwin of Boston and Dr. Butler of the McLean asylum to examine the girl as to her sanity and report to the court as soon as possible. The girl was remanded to the East Cambridge Jail.

Her uncle and aunt were in court at the time, but their niece paid but little attention to them.

After the girl had changed her plea to guilty, Mrs. Jordan was called to the stand to tell the story of the poisoning.

"This girl was in my family for two years," said Mrs. Jordan. "She had always called me aunt. Her mother is in New York cooking in a hotel. The girl would work a part of the time and then wouldn't seem to want to work. I could hardly make out what to think of her although she was very pleasant around the house. She seemed to want to go out at night a good deal and that was what caused the trouble.

Aunt Taken Ill.

"Two weeks before I was taken sick with the poison, a funeral wreath was hanging on a door across from our house. My niece said to me: 'Auntie if two people should die in the same house would there be two wreaths?'

"I was taken sick on a Thursday, September 19, and was sick until Sunday. The morning I drank the coffee my niece made it. She never made the coffee before, but that morning got up and made it. She did not drink any. I felt peculiar after I drank a cupful and then fainted."

Fred M. Jordan corroborated his wife's

WHAT ITALIAN PRINCE LIKES ABOUT BOSTON AND CITY'S PEOPLE

Boston women are so lovely! They are so sympathetic and charming I am unable to find words fitting enough to praise them.

Boston is, indeed, a delightful city. "Your parks, drives, libraries are grand. I am really surprised with them. There is such a refined atmosphere in this city.

The Boston woman is intellectual, but not ponderous.—Prince Gennaro Caracciolo.

BOSTON AS SEEN BY REAL PRINCE

"The Boston woman is a dazzling complexity of charming manners combined with kindliness and French loveliness. She is sympathetic, agreeable, cultured. And again she is intellectual, but not ponderous."

This is the impression that Prince Gennaro Caracciolo of Italy has formed during a three-day visit to the U. S. But it is not all that he has said about Boston women and American women in general.

The Prince is in America to study social conditions. Boston is included in his itinerary. Today in a remarkable interview he gave his impressions of Boston to the AMERICAN.

The Prince talks English fluently. He talks several other languages, too. Seated in the library of a Back Bay home, the AMERICAN reporter found the noted Italian reading the local papers.

"You have great newspapers in this country," he declared.

Likes Hearst Papers.

"I like the Hearst papers very much. I can always find many things so interesting to read. You know your paper makes one think. When you make a man think, you are doing him a great service."

During the past three days the Prince has been a very much sought personage. He has been banqueted by several of the old Boston families and has found it difficult to find time for research work.

"You know," he began, "your women are so lovely. They are so sympathetic and charming that I am unable to find words fitting enough for their praise.

I have been treated royally. No man could be treated better. I like Boston and although I am a stranger in the city I feel at home. You know I met so many of your society women at Newport, during the past season. Newport! What a grand place! I went there for two weeks. I remained there three months.

And here in Boston I find it the same. Boston women really have a cosmopolitan simplicity. You know there is a fine line, line of distinction between an impression and a crit...sm. I don't want to be misunderstood when I give my impression of Boston women. One thing I notice. The lavish use of diamonds. The women here are too handsome and charming to require diamonds.

Has Many Friends Here.

"I have seen the Boston women at the seashore. Take, for instance, the exclusive Bailey's Beach at Newport. Everybody is there. It is like one big family. But I notice one thing more than anything and again don't think I am making a criticism of Boston and American women. "When you are dining with them you cannot feel different than when you are dining in Paris, London, St. Petersburg or any of the European cities. The only difference is in the conversation of the women here. I am yet to learn what topic is universally discussed at the dinner table. In London it is of course sport and Parliament. All the women are interested in politics as the big question of the day. In Paris the women also take considerable interest in government."

The Prince was questioned about the Balkan situation. He is familiar with the country and knows conditions, but declined to discuss them. "You know I never talk on political questions," he said. "You must excuse me, but that is a rule I must keep."

The divorce problem and the much-talked about international marriage he also declined to discuss. "You must realize that I am here to see your country. I am only getting impressions. I am not conversant enough with these topics to discuss them," he answered.

'MY IDEALS ARE AGAINST FORCE,' EXPLAINS ETTOR

SALEM COURT HOUSE, Nov. 13.—The cross-examination of Joseph J. Ettor, co-defendant with Arturo Giovannitti and Joseph Caruso in the trial for the murder of Annie Lo Pezzi during the Lawrence strike, was begun by District Attorney Attwill at 12:20.

District Attorney Attwill began by questioning Ettor about his early life and his visit to Italy when a boy. He also questioned him about the constitution and the literature of the I. W. W.

Asked about receiving literature while in prison, Ettor said he felt sure that some documents had been kept back and that also influence had been brought to bear by Keeper Brown in the Lawrence jail to prevent him from writing what he desired at various times. The witness said he made no such accusation concerning his treatment in the Salem jail.

Denies He Is Anarchist.

"I have never advised nor counseled force," was Ettor's direct testimony.

"Why?" asked Attorney Attwill.

"Because it does not bring results. My own social ideals are against it, because I believe that all machinery and property used for production belong to the workers, and that anything which injures such property destroys that which is eventually to come into the possession of the working people."

Asked whether he belonged to any political parties, Attorney Attwill objected to the question as not bearing upon the case.

"Not right after the election," remarked Judge Quinn, with a smile, and much to the amusement of those in the courtroom.

Ettor denied being an Anarchist, or being in any way connected with anarchy.

Questioned as to the difference betw een the American Federation of Labor and the Industrial Workers of the World, Ettor said:

Ettor Explains "Sabotage."

"The difference is two-fold—one of organization and ideal. The A. F. of L. has no ideal and looks upon the present industrial system as a finality, while the I. W. W. regard it as but a phase or step towards another and better condition. The A. F. of L. organizes by craft, while the I. W. W. organizes by whole industries and groups of industries."

"What is your interpretation of 'sabotage'?" asked Attorney Mahoney.

"It may mean one thing in one country and another thing in another country. To sabotage that I believe in is the return of work proportionate to the pay. When the pay is poor the work is poor."

Here Ettor gave an illustration of a workman filling a car with sand. When the pay was cut down the men who loaded the car did not fill it to its capacity. This Ettors explanation of "sabotage."

At this point Attorney Mahoney picked up the little red book that contains the constitution and philosophy of the I. W. W. and, approaching District Attorney Attwill, said:

Produces I. W. W. Book.

"Here is a book of the I. W. W. containing twenty-six pages. I hardly care to go through the whole of it with the witness. Are there any questions you would like to have me put to the witness, Mr. District Attorney?"

"I know of no questions I want you to ask. I am examining the present," replied the District Attorney with a blond smile.

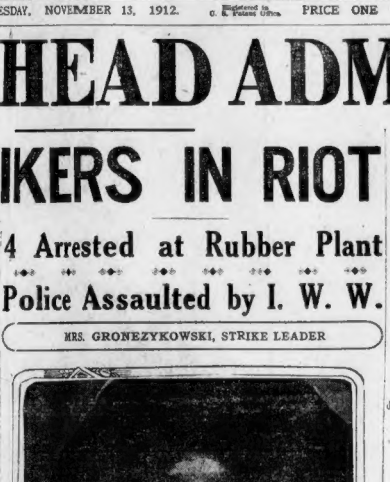
When Ettor was asked if he agreed with 4 Arrested at Rubber Plant Police Assaulted by I. W. W.

MRS. GRONEZYKOWSKI, STRIKE LEADER



Mill Hose Turned on Infuriated Mob of Workers Who Feared Loss of Their Jobs.

After a strike riot today in front of the Red Rubber Company's plant at East Thirteen, in which the police fired shots over the heads of the rioters and in which several people were hurt, the Thirteen police asked help from Cambridge. The rioters were led by Mrs. Ella W. Gronezykowski, an I. W. W. orator.

A detail of twelve Cambridge police, under Lieutenant Murray and Sergeant Fanlow, was rushed across the city line to the rubber plant. This soon 300 rioters, who remained on the scene, were 100 yards from the plant by police line.

The riot came when about four hundred strikers, incensed because their departments had been shut down with too short notice, as they claim, tried to prevent 350 other operatives from going in to work. A group of mechanics was also bound for in mill gates to make repairs, which, according to the management, is the cause of the sudden shut down.

The strikers rushed the incoming operatives and mechanics, stormed the factory gates and threw stones.

Get More Policemen.

Two patrolmen, who were on hand, were unable to cope with the disorder. Superintendent A. A. Glidden telephoned for more police. The balance of the entire Watertown force of thirteen men was rushed to the scene.

The strikers were dispersed. Police clubs were swung and streams of water were turned on the rioters from mill hose. Women were swept from their feet by the powerful streams. Two men were arrested for throwing stones.

It was after the rioters had been subdued that help was asked from Cambridge. This was because the company planned to

American Contest Candidates Rush In Your Subscriptions Before Saturday, 10 P. M. Polls Close Then For The First Vote List

The Boston News Bureau in a Montreal dispatch quotes President Edson J. Chamberlin, of the Grand Trunk, as follows:

No negotiations of ours with the New Haven road have had any bearing on the suspension of construction, which has been due entirely to financial stringency. I do not deny that we have had some negotiations with the New Haven people, but there has been no agreement anywhere near being made with them.

You can say to the people of New England that they have no cause for alarm. If we ever make any arrangement with the New Haven road it will be such an arrangement as will give them at least equal or better connections and facilities for doing business with the Grand Trunk and the Central Vermont than can be had in any other way, and unless such an arrangement can be made there will not be any agreement eliminating the proposed construction.

If we make any arrangement with the New Haven it is going to give New England better facilities than they would have by any parallel line we could construct, and unless we can make such arrangement we won't make any at all with them.

"WHY DUPLICATE TRACKAGE?"

I never favor paralleling anybody's lines if satisfactory traffic or trackage arrangements can be made. What is the use of duplicating trackage if it is unnecessary? I do not say it is unnecessary. What negotiations we have had thus far have not advanced to such a stage that I can say whether or not the building of the proposed lines will become unnecessary. But it is very likely that if there is too much talk about it now it will defeat the whole thing.

Nothing short of a 25-year agreement would be satisfactory. What the people of New England want is a free and easy way of doing business with the Grand Trunk and Central Vermont roads. They are going to have it in some way, I do not know at present how it will be, but shippers on the entire New Haven and Boston & Maine systems will be able to deal as freely with the Central Vermont as Boston & Maine shippers did 25 years ago when the Central Vermont was doing business freely with Boston and other Boston & Maine points.

The Canadian government or London have not mixed up in the matter of the proposed Southern New England lines at all. I do not think the Canadian government cares whether the Southern New England lines are built or not. I am quite sure that the controlling interests in the government are not concerned.

There is no truth whatever in the statements that suspension of construction work was influenced from London under pressure of Canadian government. It is no more true that it was brought about or influenced under pressure" of Morgan or Mellen influences.

In my opinion if the Balkan war, which has influenced the money tightness that has caused this suspension of construction, goes on for the next two months, it will close up every bit of construction work in this country, and probably in the United States. You know what it means when the European people get into controversy and withdraw money and throw their securities on the markets at the same time.

President Chamberlin took exception to an article in a Boston paper because it didn't emphasize enough the possible outcome of new relations with New Haven.

"Do you expect construction of the line from Palmer to Providence will be resumed next Spring?" he was asked. He replied: "I do not see any reason at present why it should not be. We intend to finish the Providence line, although, of course, if we find we can offer the Providence people something better, which does not seem very probable, we might not finish even that line. I do not know of anything better we could offer the Providence people."

Asked if a statement made by President Fitzhugh that the Southern New England campaign and construction expenditure to date had been about $1,900,000. Mr. Chamberlain said that any figures that Mr. Fitzhugh had given out were accurate.

"The present 2,000 odd miles of the Grand Trunk, of which nearly 700 are in New England," said Mr. Chamberlain, "are sufficient indications that the Grand Trunk is not disposed to limit its future activities and extensions to Canadian territory.

"Double-tracking of the Northern railroad, the leased Boston & Maine line over which our Boston passenger trains now travel, has never as yet been proposed to the Boston & Maine by the Grand Trunk interests, as has been asserted in some newspapers.

INVITE CHAMBERLIN TO COME HERE AND EXPLAIN

President Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk railroad, in a telegram sent today to Montreal by Mayor Fitzgerald, after a conference with Governor Foss, is requested to come to Boston and explain the stand of his company regarding the extension of the line to Boston.

The Governor and the Mayor decided on the invitation following a conference at the State House with Cy Warman, assistant manager of the Grand Trunk. Governor Foss and Mayor Fitzgerald believe that it is necessary for President Chamberlin to come here to show his good faith in the statements he has made that the Grand Trunk extensions are to be constructed.

Wire from G. T. Head.

Mayor Fitzgerald talked with President J. R. Russell of the Chamber of Commerce and told him that he felt President Chamberlin should come to Boston, so that he could learn first-handed all the information necessary. The Mayor asked President Russell to telegraph David O. Ives, transportation manager of the Chamber of Commerce, who is in Montreal, asking him to get President Chamberlin to agree to come to Boston at once.

The Mayor's telegram to Manager Ives reads:

Had conference with Governor Foss this morning and he joins in my request that President Chamberlin come to Boston to confer with public officials and business interests. Talked with President Russell of Chamber of Commerce and he is of the same opinion. Will you urge President Chamberlin to do this as a matter of good faith to Boston?

The Mayor received from President E. J. Chamberlin of the Grand Trunk this telegram:

Boston people have nothing to fear in the direction suggested in your message. I assure you that any move on the part of the Grand Trunk and Central Vermont railways will be for the better interests of New England.

Warman Couldn't Tell.

Mr. Warman was unable to give the Governor and the Mayor the information they wished. They told the representative of the Grand Trunk that they wanted all the facts as to whether the Grand Trunk was to be built to Boston and as to any traffic arrangements made or contemplated with the New Haven and the Boston & Maine railroads.

All Massachusetts is aroused by the stopping of work. Governor Foss has received letters from many prominent business men urging him to act.

Mayor Fitzgerald stated today that if it were a matter of money Boston could raise from $40,000,000 to $60,000,000 for the Grand Trunk cause, if necessary.

Mayor Fitzgerald, after the State House conference, said:

The Governor and I agreed that it is necessary for President Chamberlin to come to Boston in order to enlighten us as to the facts in the Grand Trunk mix-up. President Chamberlin should come to Boston to show us that he is acting in good faith.

The Governor told me that he had received communications from many business men in protest against the alleged intentions of the Grand Trunk. I believe that the Grand Trunk can yet be secured if the people will assert themselves.

If the Grand Trunk lacks money, as is claimed, that can be easily remedied. The money can be raised in Boston. This city can raise from $40,000,000 to $60,000,000, if necessary.

Cy Warman, after his talk with the Governor and Mayor, made this statement:

I called on the Governor to discuss the Grand Trunk and give him any information that was in my power. Nothing definite was accomplished. President Chamberlin has said that the lines of the Southern New England Railroad would be constructed as planned, regardless of any agreement with the Grand Trunk or any other railroad.

He has said that the interests of New England will be protected. I believe he will do as he says. I have an unexcelled confidence in him as I had in the late President Hays.

"Will the Grand Trunk build an extension into Boston?" Mr. Warman was asked directly.

"You know what President Chamberlin says. I believe he will do what he says."

Before going to Providence today Vice-President Pitzhugh of the Grand Trunk said at the Touraine:

I am simply waiting to hear from headquarters. I know that Mr. Ives, and Mr. Hubbard have gone to Montreal and possibly in Providence today I may hear something from President Chamberlin. Just now I can add nothing to what I said yesterday. Mr. Warman remains here to-day and will talk the situation over with Governor Foss and others.

How Morgan Did It.

Behind the Grand Trunk fiasco, as it appears today, is not the managerial genius of Mellen, according to inside information from Washington, but the magic wand of J. Pierpont Morgan's millions.

It goes without saying that Mellen was right on the job in fighting against the extensions of the Grand Trunk to Boston and Providence. He worked every move. And in President Hayes, it appeared, he had met his match.

But for one of those strange decrees of fate Hays was removed from the struggle suddenly. Mellen had nothing to do with the going down of the Titanic. But he was ready to take advantage of it, naturally. That is business in the big world of finance.

Chamberlin was made president of the Grand Trunk. That made Mellen smile. Mellen and Chamberlain were railroad clerks together in the Central Vermont Railroad office, and they call each other by their first names.

It is probable that Mellen and Chamberlin discussed the railroad business at length from a New England standpoint. But Chamberlin, as a new head of the Grand Trunk, could not himself exercise enough power, even if he wanted to, to stop the extensions of the Grand Trunk to Boston.

Morgan Could Do It.

Chamberlin probably told Mellen that. He may have suggested that such a tremendous move could only be taken by Smithers and the other owners and officials of the road in London.

All of this, of course, being known by Mellen was likewise known by the big man higher up—Morgan. What Mellen and Chamberlin could not do, Morgan could.

Mr. Morgan visited London recently. The fact was chronicled and cabled. The incident was regarded chiefly as of social interest. But it is now believed it was of momentous financial import.

Morgan, it is believed, saw the men who own and run the Grand Trunk Railroad. He told them that it would be unwise to extend their line to Boston and Providence, and thus compete with the New Haven Railroad. He explained that the New Haven practically was a Pennsylvania railroad property and that he and his associates controlled both roads, besides having a big interest in many other roads of the United States.

The New York magnate pointed out, probably without much circumlocution, that if Canadian railroads invaded United States territory they might expect United States railroads to leap across the border and compete with Canadian lines.

It is extremely likely that Mr. Morgan, by a few simple lines with a pencil, demonstrated to those London railroad men just how easily the invasion of Canada might be accomplished.

In this manner, it is now believed, the Grand Trunk management saw matters in a different light and began the negotiations with Mellen which it is generally believed will result in certain trackage rights being accorded to the Grand Trunk in lieu of the building of their lines into New Haven territory.

This picture of the Cardinal was taken at the breaking of soil for St. Elizabeth's Hospital in Brighton today.

ETTOR DENIES HE'S ANARCHIST

everything in the preamble and the constitution in the official publication of the I. W. W., he said that there were a number of points that were not stated as he would state them.

Attorney Mahoney asked Ettor what was meant when it was said there was no right or wrong in the industrial struggle.

"It simply means that when the employers wanted to gain more profit they gave no thought to the needs of the employes. And when the mill workers felt a need and wanted to gain anything they did not consider the welfare of the employers."

Ettor began his testimony today with events of January 28, the day preceding the fatal riot. He spoke nine times on that date. At the Italian Church in the morning, he had told of two men who were going about posing as members of the strike committee, giving receipts for food at the soup kitchen. One of these men, Ettor stated, he learned afterwards, had absolutely nothing to do with the strike.

Ettor denied that he had seen any circulars distributed at the Syrian church, as alleged by witnesses for the prosecution. When presented with a circular by Attorney Mahoney, Ettor declared:

"I never saw that circular until I saw it in the Lawrence police court."

The circular is the one which advises strikers to leave the mills, go among the their houses and asking them to return to work. It urged the strikers to throw such visitors down stairs and break their bones so that they might have a remembrance to carry with them the rest of their lives.

Ettor denied that he had given any permission to use his name on a circular of this kind or that he had anything to do with getting it printed. Colombo's printing shop, Ettor said, did not authorize any one to pay $26 for such printing.

"I warned everybody about using my name," was Ettor's emphatic statement.

Explains Speeches.

The climax of Ettor's direct testimony came when he told of his speeches on January 28, in which he is accused of making incendiary utterances. He explained what he meant when he made the statement that "Lawrence would be an unhappy city."

"It was in connection with the threat from the other side that the force of police and militia would be increased in order to oppose the strikers with greater effectiveness that I said, 'Lawrence will be an unhappy city.'"

Ettor also told of his remarks concerning the injury of machinery with emery powder.

"It was in connection," said Ettor, "with what was saying of the strikers being forced back into the mills because of starvation. 'If the workers go back with food in their hearts they will carry emery powder in their pockets. God help the machinery that they help to clothe!' was Ettor's version of what he termed his "Sabotage speech."

Ettor told what he had said about William M. Wood, now, knowing how many automobiles he had. He also reported his remarks in connection with the mill owners starving and their daughters walking the streets naked like savages if the workers refused to return to the mills.

Concerning the parade on January 29 the witness said he had frequently turned the parade from dangerous points where violence might otherwise have occurred.

BROKER DAVIE'S PETITION URGED

Following a hearing before the pardon committee, a petition seeking freedom for Robert R. Davie, under sentence at Deer Island for getting thousands of dollars from Boston people in stock deals, was sent to the Executive Council late this afternoon.

The boy broker, who was arrested in South America and brought back to this city for trial, declares in his petition that his health is failing rapidly and that he has been reduced to a nervous wreck.

Councillor Alexander McGregor pleaded before his fellow councillors to pardon the prisoner and declared District Attorney Pelletier would not oppose such action. In his petition Davie says:

I fully recognize my wrong doing and sincerely repent. I have a sincere desire to make restitution and will not leave a stone unturned until everybody has been paid in full. In the future I intend to lead a sober and industrious life.

Davie denies he had any of the stolen funds and says he has turned over every cent in his possession. William H. Jackson, a victim to the extent of $70,000, and Mrs. Hannah L. Greenwood, who was another victim of the young man, have signed the petition.

Councillor McGregor in his plea said:

The mother of this young man has been to see me nearly every week and my interest in this case has been brought about by her earnest pleadings. I have ascertained from Dr. Sullivan the prison official that the normal temperature of Davie in the morning is ninety-eight and that towards night it increases to 103 and sometimes above that figure. He is subject to severe headaches and has been in the prison hospital for twelve weeks. It is my personal opinion that he will not live long and the consensus of opinion among the doctors is that the boy has tuberculosis.

A Rousing Appetite Is a Keen Delight

And What Is of Greater Interest, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets Enable the Stomach to Digest Whatever Is Eaten.

We all like to see the way healthy children devour their meals. Would we could all do the same! Eating ought to be a delight. It is one of life's chief enjoyments. People who cannot relish a good meal are apt to fall into those ill-tempered moods from which they view the world as a sorry place to live in. So let us learn to employ the best means of harmonizing our existence and thus extract from our daily grind all the pleasure there is to be had. This we can do by keeping our stomachs in prime, active working order.

A majority of people have come to know the blessings which an occasional use of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets confer upon the stomach. They are unquestionably the most popular remedy known, for the reason that dyspepsia is the national disease, and these wonderful little tablets have long since acquired a nations reputation as a thoroughly reliable and efficient cure for all forms of dyspepsia and indigestion.

No matter how great the excess of food taken into the stomach, one or two of these tablets will digest every particle of it. A package of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should always be in the house. Many a person has saved himself from a serious attack of acute indigestion by using them after heavy meals, such as are eaten Christmas, New Year's, Thanksgiving and other holidays and festal seasons.

After attending banquets, late suppers, heavy fancy dinners, after-theatre parties, etc., where one has dined sumptuously and luxuriously, Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets should invariably be used, as they digest the food perfectly and completely, and prevent all possibility of dyspepsia, which, without their use, is more than likely to ensue.

Americans are exceedingly fond of the good things of life, and there is apt to be great excess of eating, and the only way to overcome its bad effects so the stomach is to employ a powerful and efficient digestive such as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which always insure a good digestion.

A. F. L. CLASH ON DELEGATES

By PHILIP J. HALVOSA.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Nov. 13.—The entire time of the A. F. of L. convention here this morning was taken up in the fight instituted by the International Association of Steam Fitters to be seated. No disposition of the case had been reached when adjournment was taken at noon.

John Mangan of Chicago presented the principal argument for the steam fitters. He was followed by James Duncan of Quincy, Mass., first vice-president of the Federation, who urged that they be not seated.

Lined up in solid array against the steamfitters, the executive council, as well as the United Association of Plumbers and Steamfitters, are opposing this action. This makes the contest of utmost importance, with every indication of a hard struggle by both sides to score a victory.

Those opposing the I. A. men's right to a seat in the convention contend they have broken the federation law in refusing to amalgamate with the U. A. Union. The I. A. men and their friends claim the executive council exceeded its authority when revoking their charter. They cite the federation constitution in support of this claim.

The fact there are at the convention an unusually large number of Socialist delegates has brought forth a well defined rumor of a secret plan to capture the federation executive council this year. This rumor is given additional strength by the fact that the Socialists themselves refuse to discuss it.

Men in close touch with this group of delegates assert that a determined effort is to be made to prevent the re-election of Secretary Morrison, Treasurer Lennon and Vice-Presidents Mitchell and Huber. They further declare that had it not been for the bitter attacks made upon President Gompers by the Buras Detective Agency he also would have been included in the list. The Socialists' hatred of Buras, however, is so intense that they may not fight Gompers, as a sort of slap at their greater enemy.

The Socialistic opposition to John Mitchell is said to be especially bitter, largely because of his former connections with the Civic Federation and his support of the Bull Moose ticket. On the other hand, the voting strength of Mitchell's opponents is largely of conjecture at this time.

Debut for Agnes Fitzgerald

Youngest Daughter of Mayor

MISS MARY AGNES FITZGERALD

Brilliant Girl of 20 to Make Her Entrance Into Society, Educated in Convent and in Germany, Is Fluent Linguist and Good Musician.

Picture by Moreau.

Miss Mary Agnes Fitzgerald, known among her friends generally as Agnes, the youngest daughter of Mayor Fitzgerald, sat at the piano in her Dorchester home today playing a lively air. She was very happy. She is twenty today. Tomorrow evening at the Copley-Plaza she will have her coming out party.

Miss Fitzgerald is a brilliant girl. She finished her education in the Sacred Heart Convent at Elmhurst, and in Germany. She excels in music. She plays the mandolin as well as the piano. She speaks German and French fluently.

The party is to be in the State suite of the hotel. There will be sixty present. The ushers will be Harry Nawn, John Hannan, Joseph Kennedy and Joseph O'Connell, all of the young set to which Miss Fitzgerald belongs.

The reception will begin at 8:30. When this is concluded dancing will occupy the time up to 11:30. A buffet luncheon will be served and the terpsichorean pleasures will be resumed until 1.

Miss Fitzgerald will wear white chiffon over dotted French mull overdress and pearl trimming—a very simple costume, she said.

GAS KILLS TWO IN HAVERHILL HOUSE

HAVERHILL, Nov. 13.—Frank Chaplin, a coachman, and Miss Mollie Leary, a housemaid, were found dead early today in a lodging house conducted by Mrs. Lillian Ledoux on Green street. Death was due to asphyxiation by gas. They were employed by the same family. Chaplin hired a room last Saturday. Today when other lodgers detected the odor of gas, the door of Chaplin's room was broken open. The flow of gas from a heater disclosed the fact that Chaplin disconnected the tube late last night, believing that he had shut off the gas.

MONTREAL TO HEAR SCOTNEY TONIGHT

Miss Evelyn Scotney, the brilliant coloratura soprano of the Boston Opera company, will make her debut in Montreal tonight, singing Gilda in "Rigoletto," following Mme. Edvina's appearance in "Louise," the important event of the opening week in the Canadian city. Miss Scotney has been widely heralded and anticipation is keen with regard to her initial performance. Later she will sing there in "Lucia" and "Traviata."

Jewish Society To Give Comedy To Aid Charity

Professional material and a professional coach have been obtained for the second annual play of the Jewish Children's Aid Society, to be held November 26 at Jordan Hall.

This year's production is entitled "Billy" and is in three acts. It is taken from the vaudeville sketch called "Billy's Tombstone" and produced this season by Sidney Drew at a local vaudeville house.

Miss Lily Carthew, formerly associated with Henry Dixey, has been engaged to take charge of the production.

Benjamin O. Rosenkrans, who made such a success in last year's show in which he played the leading part, will assume the title role in "Billy," a college football hero who is unable to propose to the girl he loves, owing to the loss of his false teeth which hinders his speech.

Another familiar face in the cast is that of Miss Ray Harlamon, who demonstrated her capabilities in last year's performance of "The Man on the Box."

Miss Anne Segal, who is playing in the role of Billy's sister, is better known for serious work on the stage than a portrayer of light comedy. She is a graduate of the College of the Spoken Word and has done much the same there.

Other members of the cast are the Misses Isabella Vinick, Sarah Mazur and Flora Green, and Louis Sanger, Louis Harvita, Charles Gilman, Charles Gliffx, Buck Freedman, Maxwell Feldman, Samuel Katz and Harry Rosenkrans.

The proceeds are devoted to the Home for Destitute Jewish Children.

"Tears your druggist get half ounce of Globe Fine Compound (Concentrated Pine) and two ounces of Glycerine. Then take two ingredients home and put them in a half pint of good whiskey; shake well and use in doses of one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime." Smaller doses to children according to age. Be sure to get only the genuine Globe Fine Compound (Concentrated Pine). Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it he will quickly get it. Many mixtures are of large quantity and cheaper, but it is risky to experiment. This formula comes from a reliable doctor and is certain. This was first published here six years ago and local druggists say it has been in constant demand ever since.

The jury deliberated from 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon until 9 last night before it reached the verdict. A week ago the men were tried and the jury disagreed. They will be sentenced later.

LOSS OF $63,000 BY HAVERHILL FIRE IN THE EARLY MORNING

HAVERHILL, Nov. 13.—A fire in the four-story brick building occupied by the George J. Kelly Rubber Company and the Safety Gas Lighter Company today did $63,000 damage and kept the firemen busy from 2:40 a. m. to 8 o'clock before they got it extinguished.

The first known about the fire was when policemen saw the flames shooting through the roof. The building is in the heart of the shoe section. The firemen by quick, hard work were able to keep the flames confined to the building and in the upper section, where they started.

In fighting the fire so much water was pumped into the building that practically all of the stock, consisting of pasted goods, was ruined. Mr. Kelly said that his loss would total $50,000 and the gas lighter company placed its loss at $12,000.

"I am about to retire from active and financial interest in Georges"

"Away back in 1879 I established the nucleus of the GEORGES retail clothing business, which today ranks among the largest in the United States, embracing great stores in five large cities of the East. I am about to retire, feeling that I would like to enjoy some of the fruits of my hard-earned success. In turning over the reins of office to my son, Mr. Georges, Jr.—I do so without the slightest doubt as to the continued success of the GEORGES group of stores. He has for years been the inspiring genius of the organization. In retiring, I wish to thank the public for the confidence in the GEORGES stores, which has made my success possible."

Georges Sr.

THE above announcement speaks for itself. Mr. Georges, Jr.—who now assumes entire management and financial control, cannot legally take over the ownership of the business until he makes a big settlement to the retiring member. The cash must be raised quickly. Here's how he's going to do it—

ALL WIND, SAYS FRUIT CO. HEAD OF SUIT REPORT

President Andrew W. Preston of the United Fruit Company, No. 131 State street, denied today knowledge of the report that the United States through its Department of Justice had filed a suit against his company asking the dissolution for alleged violation of the Sherman anti-trust law.

When the statement was shown to President Preston at his office he read it carefully, then thought for a while and said:

"Why, this is all wind! Surely I would have heard of such a suit. It is the creation of some fertile mind.

"Anyway, the United Fruit Company is perfectly competent and willing to explain its business transactions and there will be nothing of this kind to favor a suit.

"Don't worry over it! When the time comes, if it does come, for this company to defend itself, it will be reasonably done."

This big Boston company, it is said, has been under investigation by the Department of Justice for some time, and a bill of complaint in the case has already been prepared.

Dispatches from Washington today said that a bill of complaint had already been prepared. The specific charges against the company, it is said, will be that it has resorted to unfair practices in its tremendous distributing business.

The United Fruit Company is one of the biggest industrial corporations doing business from Boston, although it was incorporated in New Jersey.

It is commonly known as the Fruit Trust. It has an authorized capital stock of $35,000,000, of which $29,764,700 has been issued. It's surplus is $13,762,088.

It owns the entire capital stock of the Tropical Fruit Steamship Company, Ltd., of London, and controls the stock of the Nipa Bay Company, a $7,000,000 corporation which is in the sugar plantation line in Cuba.

The management of the United Fruit Company is practically all Boston. Its officers and directors are some of the richest men in the city, as follows:

President—Andrew W. Preston of No. 25 Bay State road, with house at Swampscott. Mr. Preston is also president or director in twenty other big corporations, including American Mail, First National Bank, Fruit Dispatch, Fruit Wharf, N. E. Casualty, Old Colony Trust, Seshlipit Land, Simmons Sugar and U. S. Smelting.

Vice-president—M. C. Keith of New York City.

Treasurer and assistant secretary—Charles A. Hubbard of Newton Centre.

Secretary—Bradley W. Palmer of No. 318 Beacon street, with house at Topsfield. Mr. Palmer is of the law firm of Storey, Thorndike, Palmer & Dodge.

Assistant treasurer—J. F. Tilden of Arlington Heights, also in sugar and mining.

Directors—The first four of the above officers and John S. Bartlett of Lynn, also in gas, sugar and trolleys.

Reginald Foster, No. 45 Pewsy, house at Manchester, also director in insurance, railroad and textile companies.

William S. Spaulding, No. 99 Beacon street, also director in Consolidated Gas, Boston Elevated, National Shawmut Bank and others.

Francis H. Hart, No. 191 Bay State road, vice-chairman of directors of Old Colony Trust Company, director of twenty corporations.

KIDNEY TROUBLE VANISHES

GAINED EIGHTEEN POUNDS

Some time ago I was troubled with what the doctors pronounced to be floating kidney. I was completely run down and so weak and exhausted that if I did my housework one day I would have to stay in bed the next. I doctored with several physicians and they all told me that my kidneys would never be well. I decided to try Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root and found that I got relief. I continued the use of Swamp-Root and today my kidneys are in fine shape and I am enjoying the best of health. Have gained eighteen pounds, and feel as well as ever in my life. You can publish this letter if you wish to.

Very truly yours,
MRS. JOHN S. JONES,
Granville, N. Y.

State of New York, County of Washington } ss.

Appeared before me personally, this 23rd day of July, 1909, Mrs. John S. Jones, who subscribed the above statement and made oath to the same is true in substance and in fact.

A TEN CENT BOX OF "CASCARETS"

Insures you for months Against Headache, Biliousness, Constipation, Bad Stomach.

Put aside—just once—the Salts, Cathartic Pills, Castor Oils or purgative waters which merely force a passageway through the bowels, but do not thoroughly cleanse, freshen and purify these drainage or alimentary organs, and have no effect whatever upon the liver and stomach.

Keep your inside organs pure and fresh with Cascarets, which thoroughly cleanse the stomach, remove the undigested, sour and fermenting food and foul gases, take the excess bile from the liver and carry out of the system all the constipated waste matter and poisons in the intestines and bowels.

A Cascaret tonight will make you feel great by morning. They work while you sleep—never gripe, sicken, and cost only 10 cents a box from your druggist. Millions of men and women take a Cascaret now and then and never have Headache, Biliousness, Coated Tongue, Indigestion, Sour Stomach or Constipated bowels. Cascarets belong in every household. Children just love to take them.

The Trip to California Under Special Care

"You feel like sorting out and tying together the memories of this trip and keeping them separate from all other trips." A woman recently said this after a pleasant experience on a Burlington Route "Personally Conducted" excursion party to California. She traveled alone, but met many agreeable people on the car, which was in charge of a special conductor. This good natured official was a well-informed, courteous host, who went all the way through with the party, looking after their comfort and attending to all the little details of the trip. Thus a woman or child in one of these parties can travel with perfect safety and freedom from care. If you would like to know more about the Burlington's comfortable and inexpensive personally conducted excursions, please write for a pocket guide and folder, mailed free. Ask any ticket agent, or address W. R. Callaway, New England Passenger Agent, C. B. & Q. R. R., 366 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

HOW WOULD YOU SPEND THE LAST QUARTER YOU HAD?

If you had only a quarter in your pocket and didn't know where you'd ever get another—in fact, if you were reduced to your last twenty-five-cent piece—what would you buy?

Would you spend your last quarter for something to eat, or something to drink, or something to wear, or would you put it to some use apart from your physical comfort?

A London newspaper has been asking noted men how they would spend their last shilling.

Sir Hiram Maxim replied:

"I would have my first drink with my last shilling, smash a window and enjoy the King's hospitality."

Sir Arthur Pinero gets cynical, as follows:

"Your telegram has been rewired to me from London at the cost of a shilling and three pence. This disposes of the question. Please send me odd three pence."

How about you?

DELICIOUS "SYRUP OF FIGS" FOR A BAD LIVER OR SLUGGISH BOWELS

This gentle, effective fruit laxative thoroughly cleans your stomach, liver and 30 feet of bowels of sour bile, poisons, gases and clogged-up waste

A harmless cure for sick headache, for biliousness, for a sour, gassy, disordered stomach, for constipation, indigestion, coated tongue, sallowness, pimples—take delicious Syrup of Figs. For the cause of all these troubles lies in a torpid liver and sluggish condition of your thirty feet of bowels.

A teaspoonful of Syrup of Figs tonight means all poisonous waste matter, the undigested, fermenting food and sour bile, gently moved on and out of your system by morning, without griping, nausea or weakness. It means a cherry day tomorrow—many bright days thereafter.

Please don't think of gentle, effective Syrup of Figs as a physic. Don't think you are dragging yourself, for luscious figs, senna and aromatics cannot injure anyone.

This remarkable fruit preparation is a wonderful stomach, liver and bowel cleanser, regulator and tonic, the safest and most positive ever devised. The day of violent purgatives, such as calomel, pills, salts and castor oil is past. They were all wrong. You get relief, but at what a cost! They act by flooding the bowels with fluids, for these fluids were evacuative. Syrup of Figs embodies only harmless laxatives, which act in a natural way. It does what right food would do—what eating lots of fruit and what plenty of exercise will do for the liver, stomach and bowels.

Be sure you get the old reliable and genuine. Ask your druggist for the full name, "Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna," prepared by the California Fig Syrup Company. Hand back, with scorn, any Fig Syrup imitation recommended as "just as good."

Boston Greets 'My Best Girl' Clifton Crawford the Star

TWO OF PRINCIPALS AT THE BOSTON THEATRE.

CLIFTON CRAWFORD AND RITA STANWOOD IN "MY BEST GIRL"

Musical Comedy at Boston Theatre Brings Encores for Its Spirited Song Hits.

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

Occasionally you are impressed with the idea that modern musical comedy may be serious business to an actor who has nothing more substantial to work with than his own reputation as a comedian. It struck me that way at the Boston Theatre last evening where Clifton Crawford came to his own rescue so often during the performance of "My Best Girl" that I wondered at his skilful command of things and hoped he wouldn't drop exhausted from the effort.

Mr. Crawford deserved a better fate and a better play. "My Best Girl" was pleasing enough in a simple way, but it was almost entirely barren of the elements that contribute to a big musical comedy success. Without Mr. Crawford, who appeared overworked, there would not have been much outlowing entertainment. But that sprightly young man saved himself and the piece by injecting into it his own particular brand of humor, and, what started out as rough traveling for everybody, settled into quiet and respectable dramatic pastime, with the usual musical comedy frills in the shape of pretty girls and a large measure of Mr. Crawford himself.

One of the most easy-to-file comedians I have ever known, graceful and refined and with a personality that makes you an easy captive to his acts, Mr. Crawford made the most of his difficult task last evening. While the evening may not have yielded an abundance of good things you were at least sure of comfortable moments when Mr. Crawford was on the stage.

Those twin authors of Broadway—Channing Pollock and Rennold Wolf—furnished Mr. Crawford with a pretty, romantic story, but it never developed anything stronger than lukewarm complications. Novelty was attempted by placing the first scene in an automobile salesroom, which for some reason or other was frequently crowded with members of the chorus. Then you moved to Governor's Island, where Mr. Crawford gave up being a Broadway sport and tried to comfort himself as a plain private in the army. It was a dramatist's trick, but it worked, and Mr. Crawford managed to get a lot of fun out of his troubles—fun that has no difficulty in spreading itself all over the audience. Mr. Crawford was a lively little joker as a soldier boy.

Sharing the brightest portions of the performance with Mr. Crawford, and revealing a girlish grace that was distinctly pleasing, was Rita Stanwood, who had but little to do except to play the demure ingenue. Hers was an idle role, but she made it effective.

Musically "My Best Girl" passed completely into Mr. Crawford's hands. His "If the Morning After Were the Night Before" gave him a friendly introduction to his audience. It was a deliciously philosophical song and was done in Mr. Crawford's best style. "My Best Girl" was another fetching number, in which Mr. Crawford and Miss Stanwood fed a hungry audience with many encores. Maud Raymond brought ragtime to the front with two spirited songs and Frank Belcher, whose voice was as broad as his shoulders and as deep as his fifty-inch chest, made the enlisted man the hero of the second act with a song called "Regular Army Man."

Mr. Crawford was so much better than his play that "My Best Girl" appeared narrow chested at times. For the most part it was too dull to be interesting, but Mr. Crawford was always cheerfully rushing to the rescue. He was the main prop that kept the piece from falling into real consequences.

Mr. Crawford maintained a proper musical comedy spirit in spite of his doubtful company.

READY FOR BIG FEIS TOMORROW

All arrangements are complete for the second annual feis and ball o f the Gaelic League to be held tomorrow evening in Paul Revere and Talbot Halls, Mechanics building.

There will be many interesting features in the grand march. Frank O'Conley of New York, who comes to Boston especially for the feis, will appear in piper's garb with the Irish pipes. Donal O'Connor, organizer of the Gaelic League, will take part in the march wearing the Irish kilts of the period of Queen Elizabeth.

NEW HACKETT WITNESS FOUND

AUGUSTA, Me., Nov. 13—The defense for Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond, who goes on trial in the Supreme Judicial Court next Monday for the murder of Mattie Hackett of Readfield, seven years ago, has discovered a new and important witness for Mrs. Raymond, a Penobscot County tramp, according to report which was persistently circulated today.

This tramp is not to be confused with Alford Johnson, another tramp, who was at the Hackett farm the evening of the murder, who was at first under suspicion, but who is now out on bail as a witness for the State.

This Penobscot County tramp is a wholly new character in this baffling murder mystery.

He is said to have been in Readfield that same fatal evening when Mattie Hackett was strangled to death by a vengeful and cunning assassin.

And he is said, according to this persistent report today, to have evidence regarding the movements of Mrs. Elsie Hobbs Raymond at the time of the murder which will be of great value to the defence.

Frank A. Morey, of McGillicuddy & Morey, counsel for Mrs. Raymond, has just returned from a trip to Penobscot County. On his return the question was put squarely up to him whether or not such a new witness as this tramp had been unearthed and whether or not Mr. Morey had been over the county line to talk with this tramp.

Mr. Morey immediately became very secretive. He not only declined to clear up the tramp rumor, but he even declined to say where he had been on this last trip.

"I have nothing to say whatever," was Mr. Morey's reiterated answer.

Alford Johnson, the tramp who is out on bail as a State witness, is working on a farm near here and is ready to appear when the trial begins next Monday.

Prescription That Soon Knocks Rheumatism

The only logical treatment for rheumatism is through the blood. The poisons that settle in muscles, joints and back, causing severe pain, must be dissolved and expelled from the system or there can be no relief. This prescription from a noted doctor is said to be working wonders all over the country. Hundreds of the worst cases were cured by it here last winter. From your druggist get one ounce of Torix compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bed-time. Results come the first day. If your druggist does not have a few bottles on hand in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Torix compound in the original, one-ounce, sealed, yellow package.

SORE FEET. Corns, Callouses, Bunions, Frost Bites, Aching and Sweaty Feet. A spoonful of Calcoide in the foot-bath gives instant relief. Get a 25c. box at any drug store. Advertisement

Epidemic of 'Ramsayitis' Here

Many of the Solutions Are Clever and May Result in Capturing Prize.

An epidemic of "Ramsayitis" has struck Boston.

"Ramsayitis" is a disease whose victims persist in expressing their thoughts in sign language.

The cause of said epidemic can be traced to an invitation issued by the AMERICAN to its readers to try their hand at sign-writing.

This offer was based on the suggestion of Sir William Ramsay, the eminent British scientist, that simple signs might well replace many written words.

The "Ramsayite Editor" of the AMERICAN offered a short sentence for readers to express in signs. The sentence is:

"I am lost and hungry. Where can I find food and shelter?"

Five prizes of one dollar each will be awarded.

Readers are sending in "sign solutions" in great quantity. Judging by the cleverness of some of the answers, a large number of Boston and New England people could worry along very decently if they had to confine their writing wholly to signs.

Try your hand at sign writing a la Ramsay. You may get a prize. And you'll have a lot of fun, anyhow.

TIME TO SPEED IN BIG CONTEST

BY THE CONTEST EDITOR.

The rally cry for candidates in the AMERICAN'S $40,000 contest is "NEXT SATURDAY."

Saturday night at 10 o'clock marks the close of the Special Cash competition for the 100 EXTRA prizes.

The Contest Department at 5 Winthrop square (just around the corner from Summer and Devonshire streets) will be open until 10 p. m., Saturday, to receive votes and subscriptions.

The first vote list, showing the standing of each candidate, will be compiled immediately after saturday night, November 16, at 10 p. m. Only votes and subscriptions received before that hour on that day will be counted in compiling the first vote list.

Three full days remain in which to pile up a good vote standing. A great deal can be accomplished in three days. Every vote, every subscription that it is possible to get a week or a month from now can be got in the next three days and turned in so that it will show to your advantage in the first vote list.

Five hundred dollars, $250, $150, $100, $50, $25 and $5 each to ninety-four others are the immediate rewards to be distributed after next Saturday night.

One hundred will win Extra Prizes, and the work done in the next three days will tell the story as to who the one hundred will be.

Fifteen hundred and forty-five dollars in cash will undoubtedly make very many some Thanksgiving gifts, but the real battle, the big fight is for the $10,000 in cash and 1,500 other prizes, and it is not difficult to see that the winners of the Extra Cash prizes will have a distinct advantage in the race to the final goal.

SOCIETY OUT IN FORCE TODAY FOR "COLLEGE HERO"

Society came out in full force today to attend the afternoon performance of "The College Hero," at the St. James Theatre. Boston has put its seal of approval upon this production, which is a medley of entrancing lyrics. The cast—a big one, containing 700 of the Hub's best amateurs—would do justice to any company of professionals.

It is the most stupendous production attempted in this city by amateurs. It would be difficult indeed to comment upon the splendid acting of the pretty girls and clever men without omitting the name of somebody. And everybody in the cast deserves praise. One of the best scenes is in the Transformation of the Wizard and the Carnival, in which the Wizard played by Gerald Page sings 'I am a Man of Mystery.' The Campus Cops with their funny makeup and clever dancing received their share of applause at the first two performances.

"The Billiken Man," "Morning, Noon and Night" and "Pi-Ei," are other songs that please the audience. Of course the plot is simple. There is just a little plot enough to carry the songs along and also the dancing. As for the girls, one has to see "The College Hero" to appreciate how pretty Boston girls are.

EIGHT DEAD, 21 HURT BY AUTOS IN 11 DAYS

Automobiles for the first eleven days of November have killed eight persons and injured twenty-one. Accidents reported to the Highways Commission have averaged more than one a day. Every second day, taking an average of fatalities, has carried the loss of a human life.

Neither railroad lives in Massachusetts or steamship lines running within State waters ever showed such a startling average in loss of life in eleven days. Sheer carelessness upon the part of drivers of machines was responsible in most cases for all the loss of life. Careless and reckless driving caused the injuries to 20 of the 21 injured.

In two cases drunken chauffeurs were responsible. One case was an accident pure and simple.

The fatal day was Sunday; the fatalities those four past midnight. Few mishaps occurred in the daytime.

Three narrow escapes saved an addition to the list of deaths. Here is the record in Massachusetts for the first eleven days of November:

Nov. 1—Walter Weston of Boston, bookkeeper in a Boston brokerage house, killed on the Holyoke road leading from Springfield. His companion, Ralph Hopkins of Springfield, was seriously injured. In the early morning their auto, with Weston driving, collided with a tree at a cross roads. Weston sustained a fractured skull and died after two hours of suffering.

Nov. 1—Albert L. Dimnin, an auto salesman of Boston, was killed early in the morning on Quincy avenue, between East Braintree and Weymouth Landing. His auto skidded over an embankment. Two companions were injured. The auto turned turtle, crushing Dimnin beneath it.

Nov. 5.—Two automobiles collided in West Roxbury. A car driven by William H. Edmands of Dorchester ran into a car driven and owned by John Henderson of Roxbury at the corner of Llanet and Lagrange streets. Five occupants of both cars were thrown out and severely injured.

Nov. 8—Miss Florence Trahor, twenty-one years old, was run down on Columbia road at 11 o'clock at night and severely injured by an auto owned and driven by Dr. Thomas J. Coyne of Dudley street. Dr. Coyne was arrested.

Nov. 9—George W. Pollock, a twelve-year-old boy of No. 94 Brook street, Brookline, was killed in the road. He was run into by an auto on Beacon street. The boy was at play. The chauffeur imperiled his own safety to save the boy.

Nov. 9—Dominico Bonano was killed and Venario Salvo badly injured at Saint Helights. They were driving a vegetable wagon to Boston in the morning when their team was struck by an auto belonging to William F. Smith of No. 373 Tremont street, Boston. The chauffeur was arrested.

Nov. 10—Herman Cloutier, a boy of six years, was struck by a fast driven auto on the Grafton road, near Worcester, and lies in the St. Vincent Hospital, Worcester, in a precarious condition.

Nov. 10—Isador Green, prominent business man of Lowell, was injured by the skidding of his machine as he attempted to make a quick turn when the light of a motorcycle suddenly appeared ahead. The machine overturned. Two passengers, Mrs. Goldie Green of Portland, Me., and Moses Wiler of Waterville, Me., were injured.

Nov. 10—Luke McNulty of Lawrence was killed on the highway between Haverhill and Lawrence by a machine owned and operated by G. W. J. Murray of Merrimac. McNulty had missed the last electric car from Haverhill to Lawrence and was walking home when struck by the automobile.

Nov. 10—An auto operated by Guy H. Chesler of Allston ran wild in Cambridge. At the corner of Massachusetts avenue and Charles River road it took the sidewalk, knocking down and severely injuring Mr. and Mrs. Albert E. Hetne, of Cambridge. The driver was arrested and charged with intoxication.

Nov. 10—Joseph F. Hale, aged sixty-five years, was struck and killed in Lexington by an auto owned and operated by Clarence P. Johnson. Johnson was held by the police. Hale was crossing Massachusetts avenue early in the evening with Mrs. Etta Hale when the Johnson auto struck them both down. Mrs. Hale was severely injured.

Nov. 10—Mrs. William H. Pfeiffer and daughter, Ruby, of Natick were run down in South Natick by an auto owned and driven by Thomas Toy of Wellesley. Both mother and daughter were seriously injured.

Nov. 11—Edward O'Brien of Saugus was killed on the Saugus Turnpike by an automobile owned and driven by George R. Thorndike of Marblehead. O'Brien was riding a horse to Saugus when struck by the Thorndike auto.

Nov. 11.—Captain George E. Goodrich, seventy-four years old, a veteran of the Civil War, was run down in front of No. 29 Hanover street, Boston, early in the evening by an auto driven by Robert E. Smith, a chauffeur. The aged veteran died in the hospital two hours after the accident. Smith, only twenty-two years of age, was arrested, charged with manslaughter.

WOMEN'S UNION NEEDS $20,000

The Women's Educational and Industrial Union needs $20,000 a year more than its business activities can yield, in order to carry on its social-educational work, according to the annual report of Miss Anette L. Crocker, financial secretary.

At the annual meeting held in Perkins Hall, No. 264 Boylston street, report was made that the total business receipts of the union for the past year were $107,000 and the total expenses $127,000.

The School of Salesmanship has trained eighty-two salesgirls from five stores and has thirteen teachers.

BOY CALLED 12 HOURS FOR HELP

Harold Burns, a seventeen-year-old Newton boy, was found in a vacant lot near the Hotel Canterbury in the Fenway early today exhausted and bruised. He had lain in the lot over twelve hours during which he had waved his arms and with a weakened voice called in vain for aid. He was picked up by an automobile party. He was taken to the Back Bay police station and later to the City Hospital.

Young Burns fell from the rear of Taft & Mitchell's Newton auto express yesterday afternoon at the corner of Winter and Washington streets.

The driver of the truck, Charles McIntyre, had noticed the boy on the auto, but did not see him fall. When the boy fell from the rear of the truck he struck on the back of his head and was stunned and cut.

He had no money with him and started to walk to his home at No. 42 Chesley ro l, Newton Centre. After he had covered nearly two miles he became weak and went into the lot and sat down to rest. He gradually grew weaker. He tried to get up, but did not have the strength. All through the night the boy laid on the ground unnoticed and nearly dead from exhaustion.

When found today he could hardly talk.

Avoid Soothing Syrups

Cure Your Cough by Nature's Method

The danger in using soothing syrups and patent medicines for coughs and colds lies in the fact that they so often contain drugs and opiates. These deaden the functions instead of supplying the healing ingredients that assist Nature to throw off the germs that cause the trouble.

To secure immediate relief and to break up the most severe cold inside a single day, shake together in a bottle a couple of ounces of glycerine, eight ounces of whiskey and half an ounce of Virgin Oil of Pine, and take a teaspoonful every four hours. This is a natural remedy and entirely harmless.

Any druggist can supply you with genuine Virgin Oil of Pine, which comes only in sealed half-ounce vials in wooden cartons bearing the label of have been driven from all their advanced posts during the past three days' fighting.

SERVIAN TROOPS SEIZE DURAZZO

The beginning of the main attack by the Bulgarians was delayed two days owing to the difficulty in transporting ammunition over roads made soggy by several days' rain and to delay of reinforcements from Adrianople reaching the Bulgarian front. The cannonading on both sides is terrific.

Servians Seize Durazzo.

BELGRADE, Nov. 13.—A Servian army today occupied Durazzo, the chief Albanian port on the Adriatic Sea, according to private advices received here. The news was generally accepted as true. Austria has protested against Servia seizing any Adriatic ports, but the Servian government is showing by its determined attitude that it intends to carry out its program.

Belief is growing here that Austria's aggressive diplomatic protests against seizure of Adriatic territory by Servia was chiefly for effect and that Austria will be persuaded by the Powers to accept the verdict of a council of the Powers as to Servia's territorial expansion, after the campaign ends.

Another Servian army is moving toward Durazzo and a coalition Serb-Montenegrin column is moving southward upon Durazzo.

Servia to Get Port.

LONDON, Nov. 13.—A dispatch from Sofia states that the negotiations conducted by Dr. Danneff, the special Bulgarian envoy sent to Budapest, have resulted favorably for Servia regarding her demand for an outlet on the Adriatic. This indicates that the peril of a clash between Servia and Austria has been obviated for the time being at least.

Russia Mobilizing.

BERLIN, Nov. 13.—Complete mobilization of the Russian military forces in Europe has been ordered, according to advices from St. Petersburg.

That Russia has been secretly preparing for any eventuality growing out of the Balkan war has been known for several days, but it was not believed that the entire would be placed upon a war footing.

Russia Not to Fight.

ST. PETERSBURG, Nov. 13.—Russia does not intend to go to war over the question of Servia obtaining a port on the Adriatic Sea, according to Sergius Sazonoff, the Russian Foreign Minister.

M. Sazonoff informed M. Popovitch, the Servian minister here, that this decision had been reached as the result of conversations with the ambassadors of the other Powers.

MILL STRIKERS STORM GATES

pay off two or three departments this afternoon and more trouble was feared.

Mrs. Kitty W. Gronsyskowski and a group of the principal strikers went to Lawrence to-day in the I. W. W. to take official charge of the dispute between the Hood Rubber Company and its employes.

After the Cambridge police arrived and the departure of most of the strikers gave the officers less to do, it was noticed that several of the police were wearing brand new rubbers. They had obtained these, it was said, in the stockroom of the Hood company, and, it was also said, without cost.

Manager Rose of the company said that the police were getting rubbers there, but he did not know if they were paying for the same.

Half a dozen policemen could be seen smoking in the companys offices.

The trouble, according to the strikers, dates back to the formation of a union among the 3,500 employes by the I. W. W. Last Friday the following notice was posted of a shutdown "for repairs":

"In order to make extensive alterations in the calender cutting room and tacking department and necessary repairs in other parts of the plant, this mill will close as follows:

Calender cutting department, all divisions, quarter making department, all divisions, and the making department all divisions, will close tonight, Friday, November 8, 1912. The packing department, all divisions, will close Saturday, November 9, 1912.

"Foremen will notify employes when their services will be required. Employes will be paid next week on regular pay day.

RUBBER COMPANY'S COUNSEL PRESENTS ITS SIDE OF THE WALKOUT

H. E. Warner, counsel for the H. P. Hood Rubber Company, today issued the following statement:

A notice was posted last Friday, November 8, that the factory would be closed to make alterations in departments and machinery and repairs to the boilers and machinery. Two departments had been shut down for a few days prior to Friday. The notice also stated that the foremen would notify the employes when their services would be required.

On Monday, November 11, a committee composed of a Mr. Ballam and some ten of our employes called at the factory and met the superintendent, Mr. Glidden, and a few of his assistants. Mr. Ballam stated that he was a national organizer of the I. W. W., and that he was authorized to speak as the attorney of the others present.

Mr. Glidden asked the committee to state the object of their visit, and Mr. Ballam acting as spokesman said that they wished to know when the factory was to resume; that a mass meeting of the I. W. W. was to be held in Cambridge the next day and they wanted to have something to report at that meeting. He also stated that there were no demands for higher wages, or other complaints, but that the men did want to know when they could go to work again.

Mr. Glidden invited each one of the visitors to speak, and no demand or complaints were made except in a few minor complaints separate and personal in character, and they expressly disclaimed having any general complaints or any dissatisfaction with the general situation, wages or hours, or anything to ask for.

Mr. Glidden then replied that the mill was closed for extensive alterations and repairs, that it was impossible to tell when it would resume, or whether the mill would resume gradually, or in all departments at one time, and he explained the nature of the repairs and alterations, saying that a part of the machinery was being moved into the new building which had been built across the tracks, that boilers were being moved, that three departments were being moved from one building to another and that the actual date of the completion of these alterations could not be determined at that time. The interview lasted less than half an hour, and the committee departed. Nothing further has been heard from Mr. Ballam or any other labor representatives, or from the operatives.

This morning it was found that a mob of several hundred people were at the entrance of the mill, prevailing by force the entrance of anybody into the mill, whether office clerks, men working on repairs or salesmen.

The papers report that the I. W. W. voted at their mass meeting by acclamation to call a strike, and to picket the factory, but for what reason they have not disclosed to us.

MRS. WHEELER TELLS OF MAKING CHILDREN HAPPY

MRS HARVEY C. WHEELER

Both sides of the medal given Mrs. Wheeler by Cardinal O'Connell are also shown.

TELLS OF MEDAL CARDINAL GAVE

How devotion of a Catholic priest in caring for the wants of poor children enlisted her sympathy is charitable work is graphically outlined by Mrs. Harvey Carl Wheeler of No. 60 Robinson street, Jamaica Plain, who was recently presented with a gold medal by Cardinal O'Connell at the bazaar of St. Vincent's Orphan Asylum, Roxbury, for her work in aiding Catholic institutions. Mrs. Wheeler is a non-Catholic. Mrs. Wheeler said today:

Eight years ago I was summering at Wiritsiky and near our house lived a good Catholic family with whom a priest was stopping. I was attracted to the priest by seeing him playing with little children from the city, whom he had invited to the beach as his guests.

The priest's clothes were threadbare. The woman at whose home he was boarding told me he gave all he had to charity; that his money was spent in caring for the wants of the poor children of the parish, some of whom were then his guests at the beach.

I was living in my own world, so-called, and did not at first understand charitable work as I do now. I watched the acts of the good priest. There was that man of God doing a great work in my very presence. He was poor. I was rich. Ah, when I saw those children romping with the good priest and he in turn looking after their interests, my heart was touched.

"Surely," I said to myself, "there must be more little ones, friendless and alone, who would like to come to the beach and enjoy the salt air and bask in the sunshine even for a day."

I decided to do my part in what I consider God's work. I got an introduction to the priest, complimented him on his good work, and told him I would help him out. Accordingly, I arranged for a lawn party. This proved a grand success. I realized $350. The money was used in buying clothes and shoes for poor children.

After that, I opened my home for the entertainment of the poor children, friends of the priest. My heart grew for the little ones. They don't have much pleasure. I engaged the attention of my husband in the good work and he bought a farm for me at Burlington, where I care for the little children every Summer.

SUFFRAGIST LEADERS HEAR ROSE TELL OF HIRING FOUR GUNMEN

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Attired like a student of the fashions, "Bald Jack" Rose, star witness in the Becker case, took the stand today at the trial of the four gunmen accused of murdering Herman Rosenthal, and calmly told how he had negotiated for the services of the slayers.

Two of the hirsuit beauties in the American suffragette movement, Mrs. O. H. P. Belmont and Miss Inez Milholland, listened to Rose's testimony. When the four young defendants, Harry Horowitz, alias "Ollie the Hoss"; Frank Cirofici, alias "Dago Frank"; Frank Muller, alias "Whitey Lewis," and Louis Rosenberg, alias "Lefty Louie," entered court they did not swagger as was their wont. They had lost much of their air of bravado as a result of damaging blows the defence had received.

In a sing-song voice Rose told his story of hiring the gunmen to kill Rosenthal at the urgent request of Charles Becker, the ex-police lieutenant on waom Rosenthal had "squealed."

Rose said he told the gunmen he would call for them when Rosenthal was found alone.

testimony about the coffee. He said he had a package of "rough on rats" in his house, but had hidden it. Later he found the paper that contained the poison.

Dr. E. O. Tabor of Lowell testified that Miss St. Denis came to his house and called him, saying that two people were sick. She did not appear nervous. He further testified: "She came back in a little while and said: 'Hurry, these people are very sick.' I found it was a bad case of poisoning."

Superintendent Redmond Welch of the Lowell police testified: "I sent Inspector Maher to the Jordan home and we questioned the girl at headquarters. She denied knowing anything about it at first but later admitted that she had trouble with her aunt. She told me that she was jealous of her aunt."

Mother Weeps in Court.

"I asked her if anyone had suggested that she poison her uncle and aunt and she told me that a man named Bartlett that lived near the house had told her to get away with them if she didn't like them, and told me how the man in a letter told her to do it. She told me that she didn't want to do away with her uncle, but couldn't see how to get her aunt without doing up her uncle."

The last witness was the mother of the girl, Mrs. Carlotta R. St. Denis of Lawrenceville, N. Y. The mother cried aloud as she was called to the stand and wept all through her testimony. Her daughter was unaffected through it all.

Mrs. St. Denis testified: "My daughter was not a wayward child. She had been very ill several times. I did not call her wayward."

Miss St. Denis was called to the bench for a talk with Judge Chase. This conversation was not audible to any of the spectators.

Miss St. Denis, who is quite pretty, wore a long gray coat and yellow hat.

OFFICIAL "DOPE" BOOSTS WOOD

Besides having the highest percentage of victories ever made by an American League pitcher, Joe Wood pitched more innings per game than any other star of the organization, won more games than any of the others and, next to Walter Johnson, struck out more men than any other flinger in his league last season, according to the official figures made public today.

In proportion to games played, Wood was taken out less often than any other pitcher in the league, except Walter Johnson. He and Johnson were each withdrawn three times, but Johnson pitched in seven more games than Wood did.

Wood is credited with appearing in forty-three games of ball. Johnson pitched in fifty and Ed Walsh of Chicago in sixty-two. Thus only two men in the league appeared oftener than "Smoky Joe."

Wood pitched 344 innings. Johnson twirled 368 and Walsh 393. All of the others pitched less than Wood.

"Smoky Joe's" Great Record.

"Smoky Joe" had 1,224 times at bat registered against him. The only others who had 1,000 or more times at bat scored against them were: Johnson, 1,321; Groom, 1,167; Walsh, 1,437; "Bush" O'Beirn, 1,000; Willett, 1,071, and Russell Ford, 1,134.

Wood won 34 games and lost 5, finishing with a percentage of .872. Eddie Plank, who finished second, won 26 and lost 6, his percentage being .831. Walter Johnson was third with 32 victories and 12 defeats, an average of .727. Then came Combs with 21 wins and 10 losses, a percentage of .677. Bedient was fifth, with 20 victories and 10 defeats, an average of .667.

Average of .216 Against Joe.

Of the greater pitchers of the league, Wood was credited with 343 innings per game, Ford 8, O'Brien 7⅔, Johnson 7⅓, Walsh 6⅓, Groom 7⅓, Plank 7, Bedient 8⅓, Ray Collins 7⅓, Coombs 6⅔.

Opponents made 267 hits in 1,234 times at bat of Wood, an average of .216.

Kahler of Cleveland, who pitched in 41 games, was the champion wild man of the league, passing up 121 men.

Walter Johnson won the strike-out record with 303; Wood was second, 258; Walsh, third, 254. Gregg was next with 184 strikeouts.

Dartmouth Has Star Kickers for Big Game

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 13.—The Dartmouth varsity football team put in a strenuous afternoon's work yesterday, the practice lasting until long after dark. Preliminary work consisted of a long drill in fundamentals, followed by practice in getting off kicks and running down under punts by the ends.

Much attention was paid to goal kicking, and both Barends and Engelhorn got off some good boots from placement. Hogsett, who made Dartmouth's only score in last year's Harvard game by a drop kick, worked out at length at his specialty, and seems to be better than ever. It is the intention of the coaches to have several men who can be depended on to boot the ball between the uprights in case they are needed.

At the conclusion of the preliminary work the freshman team was lined up against the regulars, and a scrimmage, lasting over an hour was indulged in. Although the 1916 men have finished their season, they were called to enable the varsity to try out some new formations against a team unused to their style of play.

BALL, GREEN STAR, OUT OF BIG RACE

HANOVER, N. H., Nov. 13.—Hanover's cross-country team, which is to compete in the New England intercollegiate run Saturday, at Brookline, is fast rounding into form. As a result of last week's trials the following team was picked: Ball, captain; Hanson, Marcean, Day, Rose, Morelli, Granger. Captain Ball, however, received an injury to his leg during the trials, which will probably keep him from competing. His loss will be a decided drawback to the team, as he had been coming along in fine shape.

ANY way you wind the "dope," you have to decide that if Princeton beats Yale Saturday Yale will be an easy mark for Harvard a week thereafter. At "Mr." Wilson's home town they say Princeton is a logical betting favorite over Yale. Wherein, then, can you give Yale a chance to beat Harvard—on "dope"?

FIGURE is out scorewise. Harvard beat Brown, 30 to 10, while Yale had its hands full defeating the Brunonians, 10 to 0. Brown had chances galore to score at New Haven, but tossed them overboard. The Providence lads took advantage of all of their opportunities at the Stadium.

* * *

THE Tigers came over to Boston, and Harvard beat them, 16 to 6, with ambitious ease. Old Nassau showed few symptoms of real football in that catastrophe.

DEWITT of Princeton and Flynn of Yale have not been punting in Felton's class. None of them has been drop-kicking in big games like Brickley. The Harvard line has made fewer errors and has repulsed more savage attacks than those of either Princeton or Yale.

* * *

GARDNER plays more consistently and a much more skilful quarterback game than either "Stew" Baker of the Tigers or Wheeler of the Bulldogs. DeWitt of Old Nassau and "Steffy" Flynn of Yale are found wanting when weighed in the scales with Captain Wendell. Pendleton, Miller and Baker, Phillips and Spalding have done brilliant rush work, but not more consistently than Brickley and Hardwick.

* * *

JIMMY McALEER, plutocratic and happy from his first season as a magnate, has established himself and his Boston American world's championship offices in the Tremont building, in Tremont street. Therein, he and his official force will wield Winter baseball championship until about March 1.

* * *

McALEER hopes to make Majestic Park at the Springs a permanent training ground, to have and to hold as long and exclusively as he pleases. The players will rendezvous there in March to loosen up for the race for another championship.

* * *

JAKE STAHL, Bill Carrigan and "Heinie" Wagner expect to go to Hot Springs about February 1. If they feel then that they need more than the ordinary outdoor work to fit them for the campaign. Last year the team left in the first week in March, and had only about a week of clear weather at the Springs. Consequently they had a poor start in the American League season and had to field their heads off to keep at the top.

* * *

THIS year training quarters will be open at the Springs February 1 or thereabouts, and any of the champions who feel that they need a bunch of work can go there then and take the mountain exercise at the club's expense. It looks like the team will not be formally ordered to report before March 1, but the Sox leaders would like to see the lads who take on too much fat or slow up overmuch hit the mountain trails much earlier.

* * *

SPEAKING of the New York story that Frank Farrell might try to induce Bill Carrigan to manage the Yankees next year, President Mealor of the Red Sox said today that he had heard nothing about it.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

IN a short time it is expected the newly formed Baseball Protective Fraternity, which is composed of nearly all the big league players, will find itself strong enough to make certain demands on the magnates. One of the first things that will come up for adjustment will be the request that the players be paid for the time they put in on the annual Spring training trip.

The way matters stand at present the expenses of the players on these training trips are paid by the club owners, but the players draw no salary for the time they are getting themselves in condition for the championship race. It is not unlike the method followed in the theatrical profession, where the actors get no pay for the time spent in rehearsal, their salaries beginning when the play is produced. There are other points of similarity in the two professions, but in many respects they are totally unlike.

The theatrical profession is much more precarious than that of baseball. An actor (except the best ones) is often out of a job for long periods. Thousands of thespians are continually hunting positions. On the other hand, once a ball player has made good his services are in demand until he has outlived his usefulness.

THIS is especially true of the player who has secured a strong foothold in the big leagues. He has absolutely nothing to worry about except his batting average, or, if he is a pitcher, his ability to fool the opposing batsmen. It is a part of baseball law that he be sent a contract by the club president before the first of March each year.

THE big league ball player, we will say, has hibernated since the close of the baseball season. Soon after the first of January each year he receives a contract for the coming season from his club. He may sign this contract any time before the opening of the championship season. Some time in February he receives a letter from the club ordering him to report at a stated place for Spring practice. He asks for transportation or an advance in salary it is sent to him; otherwise he pays his own fare and later collects from the club.

Once at training quarters he need not spend a cent except for laundry. All his hotel bills and his transportation are paid by the club. He is under no expense until he reaches his home town where the player engages his own quarters and pays his living expenses while the club is at home.

When the club takes to the road the player travels like a prince. Everything is provided for—railroad fare, sleeping car, meals on train, baggage to and from the depots, taxicabs or carriages to and from depots, to and from hotels and grounds. The club will buy him all the hats he wants. In short, he lives like a fighting cock at the club's expense.

His salary is paid on the first and fifteenth of each month. If his munnies are sore they are rubbed at the club's expense; if he is ill the club pays his doctor's bill. He is pampered like the pet child of a millionaire as long as he behaves himself and delivers the base hits.

HARVARD FOOTBALL COACHES DRILL MEN IN OPEN GAME

WINCHESTER TO PLAY ARLINGTON IN BIG SCHOOLBOY CONTE

DRILL HARVARD IN OPEN GAME

With the Green team in full sight, and the Yale game a scant ten days off, the coaches yesterday afternoon continued developing the Harvard team along the line of open plays. Members of the team freely admit that this is where the Crimson linesmen are weakest, and as a result the offensives which Vanderbilt used so effectively, and the forward pass which Williams was able to pull five times in succession are being practiced by the Harvard eleven.

With Dan Knowlton of the '05 and '06 teams coach of the tackles, this department of the game is well looked after. It is interesting to note that by far the best of the tackles in the squad is Hitchcock, the standby of three seasons.

One man deserves particular mention for his work this season. This is Vin Freedley, the substitute quarterback. He does business on an average weight of one hundred and forty-five pounds, but he has been known to stop the fast work of many teams. In the Vanderbilt game, he tackled Hardage once when there was no one else between the Nashville star and the Crimson goal line.

In practice time and again he has stood up to men of twice his weight, when other members of the squad rather avoided the open issue. All told, his work this season has been phenomenal. It is agreed among the University men that Vin Freedley deserves a vote of thanks for his continued good work in face of fearful odds of weight and strength.

Wendell's ankle is still bothering him a trifle, although it is believed that "Doc" Nichols will have pulled him around all right in time for the final game of the year. He is not working out very hard just now, although he takes part in the dummy practice which is the rule each day.

Brickley and Hardwick are both in form. The old standby in the back field are all likely. Brickley is a little stiff in one of his legs but he is expected to be all right by saturday.

Scrimmage Work at Yale.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 13.—Twenty-two coaches are molding the Blue line into an impregnable defence for the Princeton game saturday. "We want to put a perfect team into the field against the Tigers," said Head Coach Howe today. Faulty work in the backfield is being remedied. Hard scrimmaging is on the work program for this afternoon and tomorrow.

Tiger Lineup Undecided.

PRINCETON, Nov. 13.—Although the lineup for Saturday's game with Yale has not been definitely selected, Coach Cunningham said today that the Orange and Black would put the strongest team of the season in the field. Two hours of scrimmaging was ordered for today, and a like session for tomorrow. There will be light work Friday. The second day's practice was a field scrimmage in which the varsity backs were hurled at the scrub defensive formation for a 9 to 9 score.

Not Enough Yale Tickets.

NEW HAVEN, Nov. 13.—Tickets for the Yale-Harvard game November 23 are in great demand and thousands who have applied for the pasteboards will be turned down. Harvard wants an increase from 12,000 to 16,000 this year. Over 4,000 Yale graduates have asked for tickets, but there is little likelihood of their being accommodated. Many Yale students who asked for two tickets will be given only one, and much dissatisfaction has arisen.

EASY FOR MORRIS.

ATLANTA, Ga., Nov. 13.—Carl Morris had an easy time last night with Jack Keating of Canada, putting him away in the second round. Morris took a round to look over his opponent, pushing him to the ropes several times, but proceeding with care.

CLYMER FOR BUFFALO.

Rindge Tech Team Has Fine Record

Green and Riley Are Star Players

TWO RINDGE STARS

CAMBRIDGE SCHOOLBOYS MADE GOOD IN GAME AGAINST LATIN SCHOOL RIVALS.

The Rindge Technical School of Cambridge is represented by a fast, fighting football eleven this Fall. True, the team is not ranked among the leading schoolboy eleven in the State but it is nevertheless able to give a good account of itself.

Rindge's last game of importance was with Cambridge Latin, its ancient rival, and the final score was 7 to 7. The Latin School team ruled a big favorite before the battle but Coach Sherlock's boys went right after their opponents and covered themselves with glory.

One of the chief features in the work of the Rindge team this Fall has been the playing of Green at fullback and Riley at quarterback. Both of these men are steady and may be relied upon to do the right thing in the pinches.

Green is a stalwart lad and is one of the best men in the Rindge backfield. He is very fast on end runs and is a sterling line plunger.

Green is also good on the secondary defense. This has proved of tremendous value to his team in all of its games so far this season.

Riley is a clever, cool headed little fellow and takes care of his position at quarterback in masterly style. True, he is not as good a quarter as Scully was when he was at Rindge but he is nevertheless better than the average general of high school football teams.

Upper photo is that of Riley, the brainy Rindge quarter. Below is Green, the great back of Cambridge eleven.

BOSTON 'COPPER' A WHITE HOPE

Boston has a "white hope." His name is Angus McEachern, and if appearances count for anything he should be the heavyweight champion of the world. McEachern is about five feet ten inches tall and weighs 190 pounds. He is thirty years old.

Today he declared for the first time that he was ready to take up the white man's burden and fight for the championship of the world.

As an athlete he is superb. He can lift a weight of 300 pounds over his head with one hand as easily as an ordinary man would lift fifty. Several years ago McEachern was an amateur boxer, but he has had no competition in recent years.

He believes, however, that in about two months' time he will be in tip-top shape to fight all comers. McEachern said today:

"I will fight any man in the world if the incentive is enough to pay me for my trouble. I have quite a few sparring partners now, and will be ready any time to meet any of the heavyweights now in the ring.

"Hope" Training Hard.

"I wouldn't go into boxing as a profession unless I believed that I could tackle the top-notchers. I am trying myself out, but until I go against a good fast professional I don't know how good I am."

McEachern is the champion strong man of the Boston police force, and has a wonderful amount of natural strength. He is endeavoring to get fast on his feet and quick and active with his hands, as he believes that he has every other qualification of a champion prize fighter.

Every day finds McEachern at the Boston Young Men's Christian Union boxing with his sparring partners from thirty to forty minutes, then he skips rope, wrestles and uses the chest weights, as he says used them.

Al Delmont, the bantamweight from the North East, trains with McEachern every day, and it is due to his work that the future "white hope" is getting in good shape. Speaking of McEachern's chances with the present heavyweights, Al Delmont said: "I think that McEachern is as good as any of the present heavyweights in the ring. All he needs is a little more speed, and I believe that he could defeat any of the present crop of white hopes."

Is Very Strong.

McEachern has never tried to arrange a match with anyone as yet. He claims that he is open to all reasonable offers and any of the promoters may make. He will meet any man in the world for any number of rounds that they may name. His friends all urge him to get matched up as soon as possible, but McEachern only smiles and continues to train daily.

It will be interesting to note how this naturally strong man fares as a boxer.

Mahan a Football Wonder

He Is as Great as Brickley

Former Andover Hero Is Now Captain of the Harvard Freshman Team.

EDDIE MAHAN

Harvard freshman football star who promises to rival Brickley on the Crimson eleven next year.

Eddie Mahan, captain of the Harvard freshman football team, has cut Brickley of Brickley and today loomed up in Cambridge as a coming star next year of even greater fame than the Everett sophomore.

With a pair like Brickley and Mahan in the line-up next year Harvard ought to be first favorite for the football championship, both East and West.

Like Brickley, Mahan is a Greater Boston lad. He hails from Natick.

Football authorities consider Charley Brickley a marvel, yet Mahan outplayed the Everett boy when both attended the rival prep schools, Exeter and Andover.

Football authorities who have seen Charlie Brickley perform this year consider him a marvel, yet Mahan outplayed the Everett boy when both attended the rival prep schools, Exeter and Andover.

Is Wonderful Kicker.

Mahan is a wonder. It was only last Saturday in a game against Worcester Academy that he distinguished himself by dropping the ball between the goal posts from the forty-seven-yard line, a feat that has seldom been accomplished.

The longest drop kick on record is sixty-five yards. But Mahan is only a mere boy—he is nineteen years old—who is improving all the time and who has years ahead of him to accomplish a more remarkable feat.

Mahan will play on the varsity team at Harvard next year and will prove a valuable successor to Felton, the only great punter that the Crimson has had for the past few years.

Kicking is not the only department that Mahan features in, for he is a plunger of exceptional ability, a good defensive player and a youngster who uses his head to advantage in the tightest of pinches.

Eddie is a veritable giant, being six feet tall, and weighing over 175 pounds. He is finely built and carries his weight well. Speed is a big factor in his success. He has often run one hundred yards under eleven seconds, and in several instances did the century distance in ten seconds flat.

Both teams are confident of victory, but with an even break in the luck Arlington looks the better on paper and strengthened by Lowe its chances are good.

Winchester has improved very rapidly during the past week, holding Stoneham to a scoreless tie, and Manager Robinson will have all his best men in the game.

SPORT NOTES

St. George Has Stars.

While many athletic stars are being mentioned in school football we must not forget the work of the four stars on the St. George team. Sullivan, Foster, Carpenter and Goodspeed. They have shown good football form all this season, being the mainstays of their team.

Heaney-Benoit Playing Well.

Heaney and Benoit are the best men in their respective positions in school football circles. Heaney plays right end, while Benoit plays left halfback on the strong Everett team. They should show up well in the coming championship games.

Natick Develops Players.

Natick High has furnished some of the best football players in the East. Last year it was Mahan at Andover that everyone was talking about. In the annual game with Exeter this year Murray of Andover and Casey of Exeter starred. Both of these fine players are members of the Natick football team.

Mechanics to Meet Latin.

The Mechanic Arts and Boston Latin teams are scheduled to play their game on Volkmann Field on next Saturday. Boston Latin will use Bill Boles, the star drop kicker of that squad. It was due to his fine work that the team defeated Beverly.

Busy Times for Natick.

Natick High is slated to play two fast teams during the coming week. It will play Westboro today and Saturday it will endeavor to defeat the Marlboro squad. The latter team is the strongest as it has defeated the Westboro representatives.

MANAGER STALLINGS IS AFTER PLAYERS

MILWAUKEE, Wis., Nov. 13.—Manager Stallings of the Boston National baseball team had little to say tonight regarding the purchase of new players.

"We have an eye on several good looking youngsters," he said, "and may buy them before the meeting closes. The minor crop this year is not as good as it has been, and the managers and owners are having a hard time getting good material."

Williams Loses Mason for Amherst Battle

WILLIAMTOWN, Nov. 13.—Coach Daly is taking no chances with his men on the eve of the final contest of the season and that while all Williams and Amherst men consider the most important of the season. No coaches have yet reported to assist Fred Daly, as is usually the custom during the last week's work, but no one has noticed this fact, as all have absolute confidence in the man who has done so much for football at Williams during the past two years.

Signal practice was held on Weston field yesterday, but nothing of importance transpired. It was definitely learned that Mason, the veteran guard who was recently injured, will not be able to take part in the Amherst game and that Almsler will not report again this week on account of parental objections.

KANE DENIES THAT HE WROTE LETTER

SPRINGFIELD, Nov. 13.—W. J. Kane, who is claimed to have written a letter to the A. A. U. Authorities declaring that Howard Drew, the local colored wonder, is a professional, said that he never wrote any such letter, and that somebody must have forged his name. Drew also denied that he ever received money for engaging in any athletic sport.

MACK GETS A FIELDER.

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 13.—Connie Mack, manager of the Philadelphia Athletics, made the first trade of the baseball meeting today. He swapped Crabb, the young pitcher who worked in one game for the White Sox, and Maggert, infielder, for Pete Daily, an outfielder with the Los Angeles club of the Pacific Coast League.

Tom Halpin Is Again in Good Standing

NEW YORK, Nov. 13.—Thomas J. Halpin of Boston, the national quarter-mile champion, who was suspended by the English A. A. A. on the charge of demanding money to run at the North Manchester Harriers' games in London August 10, has been exonerated by the Amateur Athletic Union.

Halpin was suspended for sending his entry blank to the North Manchester Harriers' Club without his entry fee. The English authorities notified the Amateur Athletic Union of this country of Halpin's suspension, and the A. A. U. directed the New England A. A. A. U. to investigate the charge.

Halpin wrote a letter to the New England Association in which he fully explained his case.

THE BOSTON AMERICAN'S DAILY DOUBLE

Difference in Viewpoint

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

THIS is the story of a girl named Ruth. It is a matter of great regret that it is also the story of girls named Mary and Sue and Ann and Jane. It is the story of girls in every country. It is the story of every girl whose parents have let their hearts grow old.

Where the Ruth of this story lives is not really a matter of importance, since geographical boundaries are not concerned.

The matter which concerns us, and which makes the story of Ruth the story of Mary and Sue and Ann and Jane, is that her parents have forgotten their youth.

Her Isolated Life

They cannot bring themselves to look upon life from her viewpoint! This is her story:

She works in town. She goes at night to a home where there are no young folks. Every girl friend she has lives a long distance away, and she can see them only occasionally. When they are with her they talk of the good times they have with other young folks.

Ruth knows only the evening after evening spent alone with her parents.

"They do everything they can," she writes, "to make home pleasant for me, but I am young and naturally long for the society of young people. In the evening when other young people meet and laugh and talk and dance and sing, I, because of living so far away from my friends, sit and brood over my lonesomeness. I try to read, but I am too young to be tied to a book for my sole enjoyment. I try to be interested in what mother has done all day, and how things have gone with father, but those do not suffice. I want some one of my own age! I am tired of living in the past with my parents as much as I love them! I want a little happiness, a little joy, of my own. It isn't fair! It isn't fair!"

Parents Are Selfish

Ruth is right. It isn't fair! Her mother is alone all day, but she is happy knowing her daughter will be home at night.

Her father works all day with a happy heart, looking forward to the companionship of his wife and daughter in the evening.

They are good parents. But they are intensely selfish. In selecting that home, so far from human companionship, they considered many things. They thought they considered their daughter's happiness. But, if they did, it was from their own sedate middle-aged viewpoint.

The father and mother would be bored if compelled to spend their evenings listening to the prattle of a lot of young folks. Yet they make their home under conditions where their daughter will see only those twice her age, and wonder, and are distressed, at her discontent.

It is the cry of the young for the kind. If a girl has parents, and brothers and sisters, there are times when her heart feels a loneliness that she can neither express nor define. Out of this unsatisfied longing is born discontent. She is unhappy, and her parents feel the sting of ingratitude because she complains.

"You have a nice home," they say. "Here are books, magazines, a piano. What more do you want?"

Youth Cries for Youth

And that question tells the condition of the hearts of the parents. They have grown old. If they kept their hearts young and looked at life from a less selfish viewpoint they would know.

I am sorry for Ruth. Also for Mary and Sue and Ann and Jane. So sorry I wish I could call all the parents together and urge them to see that their daughters have companions their own age.

I would beg them to recall the longings of their own youth.

I would beg them to give every daughter a chance to make friends of other girls; an opportunity to meet young men, that, if it is so willed, she may have her chance to love and to marry.

How to Have the Best Cough Syrup and Save $2, by Making It at Home.

Cough medicines, as a rule, contain a large quantity of plain sugar. If you take one pint of granulated sugar, add 1 pint of warm water and stir about a minute, you have as good syrup as money could buy.

If you will then put 2½ ounces of Pinex (60 cents' worth) in a pint bottle, and fill it up with Sugar Syrup, you will have as much cough syrup as you could buy ready made for $2.50. It keeps perfectly.

And you will find it the best cough syrup you ever used, in stopping coughs. You can feel it take hold—usually stops the most severe cough in 24 hours. It is just laxative enough, has a good taste and never spoils. Take a teaspoonful every one, two or three hours.

Pinex is a splendid remedy, too, for relieving tough croup, hoarseness, asthma, chest pains, etc.

Pinex is the most valuable concentrated compound of Norway pine extract, rich in guaiacol and all the healing pine elements. No other preparation will work in this formula.

This recipe for making cough remedy with Pinex and Sugar Syrup is now used and prized in thousands of homes in the United States and Canada. The plan has been imitated but never successfully.

A guarantee of absolute satisfaction, or money promptly refunded, goes with this recipe. Your druggist has Pinex, or will get it for you. If not, send to The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

The Seven Wonders of Love

No. 1—The Oracle

By Nell Brinkley

One of the wonders of the ancient world was the Oracle of Delphi, who decided all momentous problems of the world. The modern oracle is Love, and the maids of nowadays consult his prophecies, just as the warriors and kings of ancient days followed the dictates of the priestess of the Delphi Oracle.

Back From the Past

A Complete Short Story

By GEORGE STANLEY

THIS woman, as is usually the case, I was the first to break the silence.

"And yet they say the world is small," she said, extending her shapely hand. "It's over seven years since we met."

"Only seven!" the man ejaculated, with commendable promptness, scanning her features unsuccessfully.

"Yes—seven," she replied, with an amused glance, as she resumed her seat.

"Why on earth could not people speak clearly when making introductions?" he thought savagely, but he maintained his serenity of expression.

"The time has gone slowly," he answered, with a cleverly suppressed sigh, "to me it seemed like seventy."

She laughed outright, showing white, even teeth.

"Come, Mr. Brookes," she said, "why so gallant? I can see you don't remember me a bit."

He Is Frank

"You are quite right," he replied, with a sudden lapse into frankness. "It's unpardonably rude, but I don't. And yet"—he looked at her again, and perhaps for a little longer than was quite necessary, for she well repaid inspection—"I seem to know your face."

"Oh, that's nothing!" she replied, "Most people who have two cents to spend on a picture post card do that."

"Why, are you an actress?" he ventured timidly. She smiled.

"Do you still write poetry, Mr. Brookes?" she countered, changing her method of attack.

Write poetry! Why did she ask that question? The keen eyes regarded her searchingly.

"I am only a novelist, Miss Grey," he answered, a little stiffly. "I am not a poet."

"Oh, yes, you are!" she said. "Not to everybody, but to a select few."

"Who would never abuse confidence," he answered. "How do you know?"

"A little bird told me," she said.

"Well, I am afraid the little bird wants plucking for its pains," he said irascibly. The fact of his writing verse was a secret jealously guarded from the world.

"A little gossip! What a sweeping indictment! Please don't be cross or I shall go."

"I am not cross," he replied.

"But you were!" she said.

"Well, I am now."

"You had a girl typewriter once, a Mary Black?"

The gray eyes again focused themselves upon her inquiringly.

"Yes, I had—a leggy, spectacled little beggar, with a sq——? Oh, I beg your pardon!"

"Yes," she said coolly, adjusting her dress so that it fell over the tips of her toes; "an attenuated young person, and as you were about to say, with a squint."

"But a little brick for all that," he replied, "and the smartest typist in London. Why, what do you know of her?"

"Well, she is now Marion Grey!"

"You!" he gasped incredulously—"you, Mary Black!"

"No, not now—Marion Grey!"

That "Squint" Again

"But she was a plain little thing," he explained, not altogether politely, "who wore round glasses and had"——

"Oh, please don't say squint again! Can you not be content in terming it a slight strabism? It means just the same thing, and sounds much less direct."

"Oh, I beg your pardon! It was the slightest obliquity, a mere nothing!" he said apologetically.

"Oh, yes, it was!" she replied. "You must not whittle it away all together. But, fortunately, it was curable, and it is cured."

She stood up so that the electric light fell upon her face.

"You seem dissatisfied. Look closely. First of all, am I me?"

He looked well into the lovely face held up to him.

"Yes, I think I see the old Adam, or the old Eve—which is it? The curve in the upper lip, the occasional slight droop in the lower. But what a change the absence of those awful glasses makes!

"Yes, it is the old delightful you!" he exclaimed warmly, "but sublimated almost beyond recognition. How glad I am to see you!"

"And my eyes—are they all right?" she asked, after further greetings.

He looked again, reddening as he did so.

"No obliquity?" she said laughing.

"No; they are beautiful," he replied, with emphasis.

"And did you ever think of me after I left you?" she asked, with rather forced unconcern.

"Often—when I was cooking my chop," he explained.

"Only then?" she said, smiling. "I must have been a greedy little thing."

"Oh, there were other times—many other times. I put an advertisement in the 'Daily Mail,' stating that if M. B. would communicate with W. B. she would hear of something to her advantage."

"What was the something?" she asked, anxiously. Feelings she had hoped were dormant were resuming their old sway.

"Well, I really had a very hazy idea. One moment I thought of offering you half-a-crown a week more for typing, and the next I thought of asking you to marry me. Of course, it seems absurd now," he said, apologetically, "to say that either alternative would have been greatly to your advantage."

"With such widely divergent intentions, it was perhaps fortunate that you were never called upon to exercise a choice."

"I think the half-crown would have won. You see," he exclaimed, "I had never regarded you in [illegible] way—then. You were such a kiddie."

"To say nothing [illegible] visual defect, which we won't particularize—again."

"That would have made no difference," he said, warmly. "I rather liked it. Where have you been this long time? Why didn't you come and tell me of this metamorphosis?" he asked, glancing at her costly gown.

"Well, you have been a great deal abroad, for one thing, and then I wanted to surprise you."

His Longing

"Well, you have succeeded," he said, feeling that he would never tire of watching her face; "but I think I rather would have met you just as you were—poor and neglected, and sometimes a little hungry."

"Why—what would you have done?"

"I would have picked you up in my arms and told you not to worry or trouble or be hungry any more, but just come back to me—not to type, but for good. Aha! that would be worth being rich for," he said, drawing his breath quickly.

Her eyes glistened. "And if it were all true and real it would almost be worth being poor for," she answered softly.

"What a pity it is that one can't play the beggar maid on $300 a week!"

He Was Satisfied

"But you could treat that as we treat a conundrum, and give it up," he said, with a curious unstedsiness in his voice. "I am so rich—and so lonely."

"Oh, what sad rubbish we are talking!" she exclaimed, lightly; but her face had grown pale. "If you were not a professional romancer I would certainly accuse you of making a distinct proposal."

"I would plead guilty," he replied very exactly. "Have you never thought of me in that way?"

Had she ever ceased thinking—thinking whilst he had been trying to analyze his emotions and to discover the reason for the emptiness of things which had so oppressed him? Her face told the tale.

"And you care—for me?" his voice dropped into a husky whisper.

Her reply was altogether inaudible, but strangely, for all that, he seemed perfectly satisfied.

The Reward of Genius

BRIGHTNESS personified is little Johnny Pule. Certain friends of the family consider him rather precocious—but that's quite another story. At any rate he is the pride of his father's heart, and Johnny invariably refers to the youngster as a "regular chip from the old block."

The other night little Johnny looked up from his stool by the fireside and ejaculated the query:

"I'm a chip of the old block, ain't I, father?"

"Yes, my son, indeed you are," came the proud reply.

"And you, pa, you're the head of the family, ain't you?" asked the simple little lad.

"I am," replied Pule.

"Then," chuckled Johnny, triumphantly, "you must be a blockhead."

But we will draw kindly veil over what followed.

Daysey Mayme and Her Folks

Mother's Things

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

THERE never were two persons in the world who could agree on what is meant by the word "friend."

Every one thinks he has proved himself one, and the other man hasn't. Every one is of the private opinion that a definition of the term "true friend" would be a speaking likeness of himself.

Every one has his own interpretation of what one should do to become a true friend. It is Daysey Mayme Appleton's opinion that she proves herself a true friend by the readiness with which she gives advice.

She gives it with such splendid generosity! She gives it so dauntlessly, so fearlessly! She never hesitates! She is not hampered by such a petty consideration as lack of personal experience!

She has proven herself a true friend on every occasion. She did not stand back even when a girl she had long known married a widower.

She called on her promptly after the return from the honeymoon.

"You have two stepchildren," she said to the bride; "that is the reason I have come to you. I want to prove myself your true friend."

The bride looked puzzled. Daysey Mayme talked long and earnestly. She was giving the bride advice. She was proving in her way the quality of her friendship.

There are some souls of such ingrateful natures they refuse to take advice. But the bride was not of that kind. As a result of the advice given her by Daysey Mayme a document signed by the bride, and to the following effect, has been filed in the courts:

"This is to certify that I married a widower. His first wife is dead, and she left the following: Two petticoats of cotton and one of wool, all badly worn; one old corset, two pairs of hose, two faded house dresses, two dress skirts, three shirt waists, a thin gold ring, a hair switch, a good breastpin, one pair of shoes and a Winter coat. I have had them carefully itemized and sworn to before a notary public, and they are now sealed in the attic of our house. I take this action to forestall any future claim by my stepchildren that I have taken possession of 'Mother's Things.' If at any time they want 'Mother's Things,' I will be glad, in the presence of two creditable witnesses, to turn said sealed box and its contents over to them."

"It would be a wise thing," sighed Daysey Mayme, "if other women who have stepchildren, would do the same."

Working for the Boss

By THOMAS TAPPER

I.

A DAY stands in the same relation to seventy years of life as a copper cent does to a pile of fifty-one five-dollar bills.

It is a good idea to appreciate what you can do with a penny, but it makes more character to learn what to do with a heap of five-dollar bills.

Likewise it takes a great character to live not only from day to day, but with the full feeling of seventy years in mind, even if one does not live that long.

II.

INVENTORS have always kept busy trying to make clocks that run for long periods without winding. Time never stops going on. And the man who succeeds in making a clock that will go without winding for a long period will do much to teach us the simple fact that Time keeps on moving. Hours, days, months and years do not end everything. They are only names for a ceaseless motion.

Lots of us live after the old hour-glass fashion. If some one does not turn us over sixty minutes our sand stops moving.

All of which means this:

Plan for today, but let today's plan fall in its place with the general larger plan you have for years to come.

The smaller the job, the more necessary it is to have this larger plan.

Don't stick to it slavishly. Make it, and keep on changing it.

I know a merchant who has the opinion that not one person in a thousand knows how to manage money.

"I began," he said, "to study the management of my own money, some years ago, and I have kept at it, improving the plan from time to time. Now I begin to know something about it."

Keep before you what the boss expects for today.

That is the first duty.

Then—

Do just a little more than he expects. That is the long plan scheme.

Then turn about, in your thinking, and begin to figure out how much it all serves in pushing you forward on the big plan.

The next step forward will be from where you are.

Almost any job will do to start with, if it is a good jumping point. If it is not a good jumping point, it is not a good job.

A store that employs several hundreds or thousands of people is full of possible jumps.

Any one, even down around the bottom of the ladder, can practice. Some day astonish everybody by beating the world's long-distance jumping record, clearing a lot of heads as he does it.

III.

THIS merchant quoted above said that few people know how to spend money.

Just a few people know how to spend Time.

Mr. Arnold Bennett has pointed out that in the daily gift of Time we all get the same allowance.

But we all do not win the same results.

Some men make a fortune in twenty-four hours.

Others make a mess of everything in that time, or less.

It is a good scheme to work towards next week, and next year, and to ask what they can supply to make life more worth while twenty years hence.

One hour is about four per cent. of a day. If a man at twenty will devote that much time regularly to improving his mind, he will know a lot worth while, long before he thinks he can get a pension.

This is one phase of the "long plan," and there are many others possible in a twenty-four hour day.

Work on the job for all you are worth. Be a keen observer. Learn something. Also—

Walk erect, and breathe through the nostrils.

Obeying the Doctor

Salesman: "Shirt, sir? Will you have a negligee or a stiff front?"

Customer: "Negligee, please. The doctor said I must avoid starchy things."

RELIABLE RECIPES FOR BEAUTY SEEKERS

FOR A SHINY SKIN—To take away that troublesome shine to the skin and remove the oily, sallowy look, use this lotion: Dissolve four ounces of spermaxa in one-half pint witch hazel or hot water, then add two teaspoonfuls glycerine. Apply this to the skin and rub gently until dry. It will give to the skin a clear, smooth, velvety look without any evidence of a powdered appearance. This lotion may be used as a nicely supplanting face powder owing to its superior qualities. It does not clog up the pores, causing skin-roughness as powder does, but does it find so quickly.

FOR SHORT, STUBBY EYELASHES—With forefinger rub well into roots a little pyrolin at bed-time. This makes them grow long and curly. This eyebrow will come in thick and have a rich glossy effect if pyrolin is rubbed in with finger-end. A small original package of pyrolin will be quite sufficient, no care may be exercised not to get any where but in or near roots.

HARMLESS FLESH-REDUCER—There is nothing so far discovered to equal the following recipe as a safe, harmless, fat-destroyer. Dissolve two ounces of parmetin in one and one-half pints hot water. When cold, strain and take a tablespoonful of the liquid before each meal. This recipe has proved to take fat from wrinkles and stubbiness and is recommended by many physicians with most pleasing results.

BRILLANT HAIR-RESTORER—Premature grayness more often comes from a diseased scalp than any other source. Sage dressings, dyes, etc., will do no permanent good. To remove the disease and put the scalp in a healthy condition so the hair will regain its natural color and grow luxuriantly, rub into the scalp twice a week a tonic made by dissolving an ounce of quinozan in a half-pint of alcohol (not whisky), then add a half-pint cold water. This will remove dandruff and make the hair soft, fluffy and glossy. It is splendid for itching scalp and brittle, falling hair.

THE FIRST GRAY HAIR SIGN OF AGE. DON'T LOOK OLD BEFORE YOUR TIME

A harmless remedy, made from common garden sage, quickly restores gray hair to natural color. The care of the hair, to prevent it from losing its color and lustre, is just as important as to care for teeth, to keep them from discoloring. Why spend money for cosmetics and creams to improve the complexion, and yet neglect your hair, when gray hair is even more conspicuous and suggestive of age than wrinkles or a poor complexion? Of the two, it is easier to preserve the natural color and beauty of the hair than it is to have a good complexion.

All that is necessary is the occasional use of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of common garden Sage and Sulphur, combined with other valuable remedies for dry, harsh, faded hair, dandruff, itching scalp and falling hair. After a few applications of this simple, harmless remedy, your hair will gradually be restored to its natural color, in a short time the dandruff will be removed, and your hair will no longer come out but will start to grow as Nature intended it should.

Don't neglect your hair, for it goes further than anything else to make or mar your good looks. You can buy this remedy at any drug store for fifty cents a bottle, and your druggist will give your money back if you are not satisfied after using. Purchase a bottle today. You will never regret it when you realize the difference it will make in your appearance.

The Manicure Lady

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

"GEORGE," said the Manicure Lady, "did you ever have a tooth pulled?"

"Not yet," said the Head Barber, "but I have a couple of loose ones on account of a slam that I got in the jaw the other night trying to stop a quarrel between a man and his wife. It wasn't much of an argument. The wife wanted to go home and the husband didn't. The husband tried to be nice about staying out, but the wife wouldn't see it that way, so when I seen that it began to look like war I kind of horned in, like one of them old Knights that was all the time going out to fight for a lady fair. I don't know how rough the going was in them days, kiddo, but this fellow I started to talk to about his lady fair didn't wait long. He slammed me. I don't blame him at that. That's the system I usually work myself—getting in the first blow."

Her Experience

"Don't be talking to me about them vulgar fights," said the Manicure Lady. "What I started out for to tell about was the experience that I went through in the dentist's chair the other day. I wouldn't have another tooth pulled for a million dollars, George. I would rather have them stay in there and go along the best they could, especially if they happened to be in the back, the way this one was, where nobody could see it.

"The worst part about going to see a dentist, George, is waiting in line for your turn. You know it takes some hero or heroine to wait in the outside room of a dentist's parlors, where all there is to do is to think of what pain is coming to you, or else read a lot of magazines.

"This dentist had the biggest collection of magazines, George. My goodness! I'll bet that there must have been ten or fifteen sets of them. I suppose they have to have them there to interest the patients that are waiting for their turn, for fear that the patients would not be patient any longer and go around the corner to see another pooch dentist.

A Corn-Fed Dentist

"But my chance came at last, George, and in I goes, as fine as silk on the outside, but kind of quaking in the interior, as the poet says.

"The first glance that I got at that there doctor didn't reassure me none. He was one of them big, corn-fed dentists with a square jaw and a forearm that must have been developed by yanking out thousands of wrong teeth. The minute I seen him I recoiled like one of them Bertha Clay heroines that shrink back distinctively from the villain. I don't mean that he looked like no villain, but he looked strong enough to take out the whole lower jaw in the pulling of one tooth. Well, he got the tooth out somehow, and it didn't take him long. See—this is the tooth that he yanked. He gave it to me for a present. Ain't it pretty, after it has been all washed and polished?

"It is sure some fang," said the Head Barber. "Why don't you stop polishing your nails for ten minutes and give the other teeth that same effect?"

Do You Know That—

Four sparrows attended a harvest festival service at Rolney (Sussex) Parish Church, flying into the building just as the congregation started the 104th Psalm. One of the birds perched on the organ, and nodded its head to the music. Tiring of the organ, it flew across the church, and in doing so knocked off the organist's glasses. The bird was then attracted to the choir and perched itself on some corn within a few inches of the chorister's head. It stayed until the collection was about to be taken, and then flew out of the church.

A new method of collecting back debts has been resorted to by an English butcher. He has a man with a notice on his top hat telling the wide world that he is a "debt collector." This man is sent to dun those people whose accounts are long overdue, and, naturally, the ladies of the households cannot bear the idea of the whole street witnessing the visits of a man who so boldly advertises his object in life, and so it has frequently happened that money which might otherwise be lost is collected.

By BERTRAND BABCOCK

"HAVE I thought of it?" he returned. Then, becoming grave in a moment, "All I dreamed about was poverty-stricken families crying for food. Thousands of men, women, children passed me through the streets, out of the town and into a wild forest where there was nothing but chewing gum trees. I could have slept this morning, but the Elks started to rehearse for their minstrel show in the parlor; so I got up and ordered breakfast. Oh, a breakfast at the Grand!"

Josie laughed and offered the new owner her financial statement. He didn't want it, he said, as Wallace had promised to look after that part of the business. Wallace would be in very shortly, but he had gone to the barber shop.

"Thank Heaven, I shave myself," concluded Broadway.

The girl asked about the presence in the town of Pembroke, and Broadway explained that Wallace had given him until 11 o'clock and had named a price of a million and a half.

Almost the old look came into the girl's eyes.

"But you sent word to the men"—she began.

Broadway reassured her:

"Don't you be afraid. I meant just what I said to Higgins. I don't mind telling you when I came here yesterday my intention was to sell this business and get it off my hands at any price or sacrifice, but Carnegie couldn't buy it this morning if he offered us every dollar he's got in the world. Wallace and I sat up talking about it till two in the morning. I told him all you said, and you've convinced not only me, but Wallace, too, and he's some business man. He thinks with you—and me—" Broadway almost blushed at this juxtaposition of the two personal pronouns—"that the right thing for me to do is to stick right here and put up a fight for these people the same as my uncle did."

There was a warmth of feeling in Josie's low tone as she said:

"I knew you would, Mr. Jones."

And then she smiled. Broadway was almost dumfounded. Her smile of the previous evening had aroused a very definite remorse in him. Now it seemed a different smile—a promise that the girl would believe in him, did believe in him, and at the same time an intimation that she felt that he was acting solely from his own better nature, without outside pressure of any sort. But it was not entirely the effect of that new smile that made Broadway stammer and hesitate as he floundered on:

"I don't know anything about business—and I don't know anything—I never did a day's work in my life, for the simple reason that I never had to. The only thing that I've entered into in the last five years is a contest to see who could stay up the latest. I never did anything good, because I never had anything good to do. What I've needed all along was a—what I've needed was"——— Broadway was now frantically fumbling at one of the side pockets of his coat, the pocket which bulged out a little. "What I've needed all along was an incentive—something to spur me on—something to incentive me—to force me to a realization that an incentive was needed to bring about a realization—that an incentive would realize"——— Josie was now watching him in wonder, for it was apparent that embarrassment had not caused this strange wallowing verbally. "I've needed"—Broadway stopped abruptly, then added: "What the deuce have I needed? Can you beat that? I knew that thing by heart when I left the hotel. Won't you read the rest of it?"

And he threw upon the table before the girl the paper which he had been struggling to draw from his pocket.

For a moment both laughed, and then suddenly the girl's face became grave as she realized Broadway's anxiety to make an impression upon her had gone so far that he had actually written a speech and had committed it to memory. She blushed, and then put the thought from her.

"It took me three hours to write that thing," said Broadway, who apparently did not realize what his act had signified, "and I knew I'd forget it."

Then a moment later he himself blushed.

To wash muslin curtains so that they will have a sheer look boil two quarts of wheat bran in six quarts of water for half an hour and strain and mix in the water in which the curtains are to be washed. Unless the curtains are very soiled, use no soap with this infusion, or starch either, for it both cleanses and stiffens. Rinse lightly in clear, cold water.

To prevent the tipping of a mirror, smooth and round at the ends a thin piece of wood about five inches long. Place this at the middle of the back of the dresser, underneath the mirror, and fasten with a screw, like a button. It is easily pushed down if you wish to tip the mirror, and, if conspicuous, may be stained to match in color the wood of the dresser.

If you have on your hands a curdled mayonnaise the ingredients may be saved, though the labor is lost. Place it in a cold place, and the olive oil in it will gradually rise to the surface, leaving the egg and other ingredients in the form of sediment at the bottom. Pour off the oil, straining if necessary, and prepare a new mayonnaise with it.

Clothes should be hung up on the line, after laundering, wrong side out. If colored, there is less danger of their being faded, and, too, whether white or colored, if dirt falls on the garment it is better to have it on the wrong side than the right. Ruffles which fall inside the garment do not sag as they are apt to do if they fall outside.

For tomato and cream cheese salad cut a tomato into eight parts and arrange to form a flower shape. Fill the center with chopped celery and cream cheese and garnish with celery leaves. Mayonnaise dressing to be poured over at the last moment. Serve this salad very cold.

$25 in Prizes for MINCE PIE Recipes

THERE are more ways to make mince pies than anyone in the wide, wide world would imagine.

In the Pure Food Page of last Sunday's AMERICAN it was announced that $25 in cash prizes would be paid for the best recipes for mince pies, and every mail since then has poured in hundreds of letters from good New England housewives telling how THEY make THEIR mince pies.

Pity the Pure Food editor, who must open all this mail and endeavor to select those that are a little better than any others.

To help him at his work he will consult recognized authorities on good cooking.

Far be it for the Pure Food editor himself to attempt such a work.

From far and near have come the letters. Hundreds of them.

All will be carefully considered without prejudice or favor.

The winning recipes must come up to the standards of pure food and recognized cooking authorities.

The contest will remain open until Saturday noon, November 23. The prize winners will be announced on the Pure Food Page of Sunday's AMERICAN, November 24, provided the judges can arrive at a conclusion in time to catch the editions of that day.

The AMERICAN'S cooking contests have always been great favorites with New England women.

And the present one seems to be one of the most popular ever conducted.

The prizes are:

FIRST PRIZE $10.

FIFTEEN PRIZES OF $1 EACH.

The only conditions to this contest are that you write plainly on one side of paper only and address carefully to

Pure Food Editor,
Boston Sunday AMERICAN,
No. 80 Summer Street,
Boston, Mass.

They had quarreled again.

"Perhaps you are not aware," she said, "that I had over a dozen proposals of marriage before I accepted yours."

He flushed.

"And perhaps, madam," he retorted haughtily, "you are not aware that I proposed to nearly twenty women before I became acquainted with yourself."

GROWS BEAUTIFUL, HEAVY HAIR WE PROVE IT--25 CENT "DANDERINE"

Destroys dandruff—Stops falling hair—Cleans and invigorates your scalp—Delightful dressing

To be possessed of a head of heavy, beautiful hair; soft, lustrous, fluffy, wavy and free from dandruff is merely a matter of using a little Danderine.

It is easy and inexpensive to have nice, soft hair and lots of it. Just get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine now—all drug stores recommend it—apply a little as directed and within ten minutes there will be an appearance of abundance; freshness, fluffiness and an incomparable gloss and lustre, and try as you will, you cannot find a trace of dandruff or falling hair; but your real surprise will be after two weeks' use, when you will see new hair—fine and downy at first—yes—but really new hair—sprouting out all over your scalp. Danderine is, we believe, the only sure hair grower; destroyer of dandruff and cure for itchy scalp, and it never fails to stop falling hair at once.

If you want to prove how pretty and soft your hair really is, moisten a cloth with a little Danderine and carefully draw it through your hair—taking one small strand at a time. Your hair will be soft, glossy and beautiful in just a few moments—a delightful surprise awaits everyone who tries this.

JUST A TABLET OR TWO NOW AND THEN before retiring and your blood will be pure—your complexion clear.

PARTOLA "THE DOCTOR IN CURIO FORM"

cleanses the system—does away with that sallow bilious complexion—makes the blood rich and pure—gives you a natural, sweet, clear complexion. It is a never-failing Laxative Blood Purifier, pleasant to take.

"REALLY DOES" PUT STOMACHS IN ORDER AT ONCE---PAPE'S DIAPEPSIN

Time it In just five minutes there will be no indigestion, Sourness, Heartburn, Gas or Dyspepsia.

Do some foods you eat lie back—taste good, but work badly; ferment into stubborn lumps and cause a sick, sour, gassy stomach? Now, Mr. or Mrs. Dyspeptic, jot this down: Pape's Diapepsin digests everything, leaving nothing to sour and upset you. No difference how lonely your stomach is disordered, you get happy relief in five minutes, but what pleases you most is that it strengthens and regulates your stomach so you can eat your favorite foods without fear.

Most remedies give you relief sometimes—they are slow, but not sure. Diapepsin is quick, positive and puts your stomach in a healthy condition so the misery won't come back.

You feel different as soon as Diapepsin comes in contact with the stomach—distress just vanishes—your stomach gets sweet, no gases, no belching, no eructations of undigested food, your head clears and you feel fine.

Put an end to stomach trouble by getting a large fifty-cent case of Pape's Diapepsin from any drug store. You realize in five minutes how needless it is to suffer from indigestion, dyspepsia or any stomach disorder.

You All Need

an occasional corrective to promote comfort, happiness and success. These are mainly dependent upon the healthy condition of the organs of digestion and elimination.

Why allow yourself to get rundown or neglect to do all in your power toward correcting disorders the moment you find yourself suffering from any impairment of your buoyancy? Watch your health and rely on to effect an immediate return to your former state of good health.

Most of the ills that flesh is heir to, originate in the digestive system and consequently the surest method of preventing ill health is to take an occasional dose of Beecham's Pills, the digestive tonic that has been proved by over half a century of general use throughout the world, to be unquestionably the most efficient.

It is only necessary to experience their prompt and effective action in cleansing the system, preventing dyspepsia, keeping the liver and kidneys in order and regulating the bowels to learn why

American Markets Irregular, with Fractional Losses in First Hour of Trading.

STATE STREET, Nov. 12.—We forgot all about London and the Balkan scare today down here, and went ahead buying and selling to suit ourselves. Europe having little influence on the American exchanges, but prices were unsteady.

It was a sig-zag, irregular market at the start, and quotations fell off fraction-ally during the first hour. Almost everything felt the bear influence.

Having little else to use, the traders again turned their attention to the Special-Session-Tariff-Revision bogie as a speculative issue.

United Fruit Breaks.

United Fruit made a break on the scare over the report of a government suit to dissolve the corporation under the Sherman law.

Fruit went down seven points to 181. This is one of the concerns of which Boston and New England are proud. The people who know declare investors are foolish to throw over a sterling stock of a corporation which has built up a great business through efficient management.

The Wall Street Market.

In New York, after some irregularity in the international trading, the market developed a heavy tone, and nearly all the important issues sustained fractional losses. Steel Common, after opening unchanged, lost ½, Amalgamated Copper lost ¾ and a similar decline was sustained by R. Paul.

Arbitrage brokers reported speculative interests on the other side were following New York sentiment. The Balkan situation lacked effect of a positive character. There was considerable Wall Street talk, however, over the possibility of tariff revision. Lehigh Valley, Union Pacific, Pennsylvania and Atchison showed gains of ½.

American Smelting rose ⅛, but later lost the gain and 1/8 additional. Erie was unchanged, but later lost a fraction. Baltimore & Ohio gained ⅛ on meagre trading. Canadian Pacific, which has been serving as a market leader, was steady.

The curb was steady. Anaconda and Canadian Pacific in London rose, but later receded.

Read These Contest Rules Carefully

The Boston AMERICAN "Puzzle" Contest is a competition for children and grown-ups, too. Weekly prizes to the amount of $100.00 cash will be given to the winners. Everyone, irrespective of age or residence, is eligible to compete.

Each person may send in ten sets of answers, but no person is entitled to more than one prize. A set consists of six pictures (Nos. 1 to 6), with answers attached. Only complete sets will be considered. Pic. 1 a person wishes to send more than ten answers to any pictures, he or she must send a complete set (Nos. 1 to 6) for each extra answer submitted.

All sets must be inclosed and sent under ONE cover. Do not send separately. Answers sent in before Picture 6 appears will not be considered.

Answers to the puzzle pictures may be in writing, or lineahead, either with pencil or pen; they may be written on the typewriter or they may be printed in any manner to suit the fancy of the contestant. Participation in any contest now being run or which may be run by the AMERICAN will not bar anyone from competing. Each member of a family may be allowed to submit ten sets. All employes of the AMERICAN and their families are barred from competing.

The Prizes will be awarded to the persons sending the nearest correct solutions. If two or more persons send the same number of correct solutions neatness and short accuracy will be considered and the prizes awarded accordingly. But if the tie cannot be decided in that way, the tied contestants will receive similar prizes. Do not send your answers until the complete set of 6 pictures has been published. Keep them from day to day, and after the 6th picture appears each week, arrange them in numerical order and then send them in all at one time as directed. All answers must be delivered at the main office of the Boston AMERICAN, 80 Summer street, by mail, within the specified time limit. The AMERICAN will not be responsible for receipt of any answer unless sent by registered mail addressed to the AMERICAN News Puzzle Editor, 80 Summer street, Boston, Mass. All answers MUST be mailed.

These will be six pictures in each issue of the Sunday AMERICAN, but only in the following editions: Special Extra Edition, Second City Edition, Second Edition, Home Edition and Fifth Edition.

The solutions to these pictures must be sent in on the coupons cupped from the daily AMERICAN, with pictures attached. The AMERICAN reserves the right to make any change in or addition to these conditions that may be deemed necessary and the decision of the Puzzle Editor in any dispute will be absolutely final.

Answers to the first set of 6 pictures must be attached to the puzzle pictures and must be mailed in time to reach the Boston AMERICAN office before midnight on Monday, Nov. 18.

No More Cobble-Stone Paving for Winter Street!

Commissioner Rourke, of the Public Works Department, Gives to the AMERICAN Good News for the Men and Women Who Have Found Two Sidewalks an Altogether Insufficient Number for the Busiest Little Thoroughfare in New England.

Louis K. Rourke, Commissioner of Public Works, assures this newspaper that the merchants of Winter street need not fear that the cobble-stone paving of that busy avenue will be PUT DOWN AGAIN.

The AMERICAN has been talking Winter street paving with the Commissioner of Public Works in the interest of not only the merchants of Winter street, and their thousands of patrons, but of the great public, which uses Winter street—not the sidewalks alone, but the whole thoroughfare—as a short cut to everywhere.

It was represented to the Commissioner of Public Works that the merchants want NO MORE COBBLE-STONE PAVING in their street.

"And I think they are quite right about it," Commissioner Rourke said, "cobble-stones are too noisy for such a thoroughfare."

Mr. Rourke BELIEVES IN ASPHALT. He says that when the Transit Commission is through with its subway work in Winter street the street will be put in shipshape again by the use of asphalt.

If the Commissioner of Public Works will harken to a suggestion from the AMERICAN, he will FIND OUT HOW THE MEN OF WINTER STREET FEEL ABOUT THIS.

Mr. Rourke will find that MANY OF THE MERCHANTS BELIEVE, WITH HIM, in asphalt.

Others, he will learn, would pave Winter street with WOODEN BLOCKS.

Others, still, prefer a BRICK PAVING, similar to that used with reported success in Cleveland, Ohio.

It will do no harm to HEAR these merchants ON THE PAVING QUESTION, and, so far as may be practicable, be GUIDED BY THEIR PREFERENCE.

It may be, after all, that the merchants will not agree on ANY ONE PAVING. In this case the people of Winter street, and all the citizens of Boston, will be well content to leave the choice of paving to the GOOD JUDGMENT OF THE COMMISSIONER.

But, if we were the commissioner, we should not decide the question WITHOUT A PUBLIC HEARING.

This is the day of PUBLIC hearings; of publicity in EVERYTHING THAT BELONGS TO THE PUBLIC.

Public hearing or no public hearing, however, the AMERICAN knows that the business men of Winter street will be glad to hear today that the busiest little thoroughfare in New England is NOT TO BE HOBBLED AND DISGRACED AGAIN WITH COBBLE STONES.

The Murder of Canalejas—Premier of Spain

Once More Stupid Hate That Refuses to Recognize Law and Progress Destroys a Real Friend of the People

Copyright, 1912, by American-Journal Examiner.

Canalejas, Prime Minister of Spain, adviser of the King, and a mental walking-stick for the well-meaning, weak young monarch, has been murdered.

The alleged motive or inciting power of the assassin is not known. The man is called an anarchist, and he may prove to be an ally of that stupid criminal band that lives under the protection of laws—human, natural, physical and moral—and pretends to put itself out of law.

Canalejas may be, on the other hand, a victim of a different kind of lawlessness—of the sort that sets up a law above the laws of nations, and resorts to murder when oppression of the thought or the conscience fails to gain its end.

Canalejas, when the murderer's bullet ended his work, was the friend of every Spaniard—although many hated him—because he tried to cure Spain of the ignorance, superstition and degradation of ages.

He was working to give light to the Spanish people as rapidly as their half-blind eyes could take it. He was protecting the King, not so much from the people as from himself.

Carefully steering his way, holding back radicalism on the one hand, ignorance and superstition on the other, he was a hope and a light in the Spanish despair and darkness.

Now a bullet ends his life.

Comment is useless and pointless. We have, fortunately, a two-fold protection of civilization against attacks. First, and foremost, the instinct of self-preservation checks the murderer. And second, education diminishes the murderous impulse.

We must always remember, and thus avoid unnecessary anxiety, that murders such as that of Canalejas, the King of Italy and three of our own Presidents since the Civil War are few and far apart as compared with the murders of rulers in ancient times.

Too often the best man is killed. He attracts attention. His power work, patience and effectiveness concentrate upon his head the hatred, the jealousy or the insane attention of those that are criminal, envious, insane.

Luckily, in the case of Canalejas, as in every similar case, the man is but a type of the race and the period. When one falls there is another as good, or better, to take his place.

Canalejas died because he worked for Spain. But his death will help Spain, lend power to his ideas, frighten the very criminal element that connived at his murder, and hoped for it.

Canalejas worked well while he lived; he has not died vainly. The man that killed him killed only his body, not the ideas, not the courage that made that body worth while.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

ALL HONOR TO THE AMERICAN

Editor Boston AMERICAN:

Dear Sir—I desire most earnestly to express my deepest gratitude for your splendid editorials in defence of the unfortunate Christians now battling for liberty and justice in Eastern Europe.

The Turks are the same barbarians they were five hundred years ago—the same barbarians who destroyed the Greek civilization, demolishing their churches and burning their libraries. They are the perpetrators of the awful massacres of Crete, of Chios, of Cyprus, of Smyrna, in Armenia and Bulgaria and many others which history records. They are the pillagers of thousands upon thousands of homes and the violators of women without number.

From the fall of Constantinople in 1453, until now, the people who made civilization possible have been at the mercy of these fiends in human guise. But I believe the time has come to deliver Christendom from the outrages of the centuries.

All honor to the AMERICAN, which stands always for liberty and justice, for doing so nobly and fighting so valiantly on the side of the unfortunate and the weak.

THERE is no work so common that someone cannot make money by doing it well. You may say that you have no talents; well, can you wash dishes clean, and treat them carefully? There is a market even for this work, if you look for it.

Miss Marion Phillips, of No. 63 Centre street, Adams, Mass., tells how she makes money by doing the work for which other people are too busy. "I go out and help different people to get a dinner and then wash the dishes afterwards, if they are having some celebration. Then they have a supper at our church every two weeks, and I wash the dishes and get $1 for that."

Miss Hattie E. Austin, of No. 45 Quincy street, Somerville, Mass., tells in even more detail how this work can be done. "In the city where I live," she writes, "the local paper last week advertised for a woman to wash dishes at the high school lunch counter, from eleven to two o'clock. Then there are many times when a woman can wash dishes for church socialties and lodge suppers and get good pay for a few hours' work. I am sorry to say I find women who dislike washing dishes, but with good hot water and plenty of room, and a cheerful disposition, there is nothing in the line of housework more satisfactory."

I know of a woman who makes a living by going around to the homes of her customers and washing and cleaning the fine glassware and china that they do not like to trust to servants. She goes to the wealthiest homes in her city, and gets good pay because she is a specialist, and because she can be trusted. She studies the best way to clean different materials, she has a light, delicate touch, and she can absolutely be relied upon to get things really clean and never to injure them. She started by doing an accidental favor for one woman, who had a bit of cut glass that was the pride and worry of her life, and her work was so satisfactory that this first patron recommended her to everyone she knew. Her method is to do one piece free of charge, as a sample, and not once has she failed to secure an enthusiastic customer.

No matter how little skill you have, there is some work waiting for you somewhere that it will be worth your while to do.

Old-Fashioned Netting

Since old-fashioned netting has become fashionable once more, I find a dollar or two is very easily earned during the idle moments of evenings if one cannot spare the day hours. Hair nets of fine silk, so much worn and so quickly torn to fragments, can be replaced by home-made ones much prettier, and one will wear out near a dozen of the ordinary kind.

It is very easily learned, and the product of the netting needle finds a ready sale. Scarfs, automobile hoods, made of rather heavy wool, combine beauty and usefulness. It also makes a very pretty finish to a wool or silk stand cover or an ornamental table cloth.

Gets Soap Orders

I found that I could earn extra money by getting up a ten-dollar soap order and being paid five dollars by the company. It does not take long and is easy work. An other easy way is to be in a soap cloth, and get the small articles there for the same price as you would pay at the store.

Sells Hot Coffee.

A woman lives in a neighborhood where there are quite a number of factories. As she had no conveniences for taking boarders, she started selling hot coffee to the people who took cold dinners. As soon as the employes learned about it, she had all she could do and was able to earn quite a little in this way.

HER COAT

By Minna Irving

WHEN Winter to the leafless world
His coming still delays,
She watches the thermometer
With eager wistful gaze;
And half a dozen times an hour
She wishes she could go
Where zero juggles with the bulb,
And all is frozen snow,

She reads the weather man's report,
And jumps for joy one day
Because at last a frigid wave
Is somewhere on the way.
No, she is not an Esquimaux
From polar lands remote,
She only wants it cold enough
To wear her new fur coat.

The War on the Microbe

By James W. McGee

THERE is war on the microbe all over the land,
As people are drilled into action,
By far-seeing experts who wisely demand
Its extinction as well as extraction,
From the food that we eat and the air we inhale,
Since this crusade began, it is missing,
Till the only one left on whom all attacks fail
Is the google-eyed microbe of kissing.

When the microbes in myriads rose in their might
They thought not of capitulation,
Till the microbes of milk who had led in the fight
Were consumed during sterilization.
The survivors who listened as peace was proclaimed
Were condemned to cold storage for hissing,
And the only one left 'mid the dead and the maimed
Was the google-eyed microbe of kissing.

This wise little microbe can always be seen (?)
In the places frequented by lovers;
In the Spring and the Summer, in fields that are green,
And in nooks that thick foliage covers.
On the sand at the seashore he scorns an attack,
When the girls their escorts are dismissing,
As the enemy comes, sailing off in a smack,
Goes the google-eyed microbe of kissing.
